AMERICAN, BRITISH AND NIPPON PLANS

PRESENTED SO DIVERGENT AS TO BE IRRECONCILABLE

The United States Prefers Japan Proposal Over the British—Great Britain Proposes That America Eventually Abolish Ten Thousand Ton Cruisers—Japan Proposes That Yank Destroyer Strength Be Saved For Cruisers..

Never will the United States be forced into building small size cruisers unsuitable for the needs of her national defense—that, it is understood, is the answer which the the American delegates will make to the British proposal at the tripartite naval conference for the eventual abolition of the 10,000-ton cruisers authorized by the Washington parleys.

The close of the second day of the conference at Geneva has permitted the experts to reaffirm their earlier judgment that the three plans presented—the American, British and Japanese—are so divergent as to be utterly irreconcilable and are certain to make a treaty impossible unless someone recedes from his original position.

Admiral Saito, however, in a statement to the Associated Press Tuesday night in which he explained the purport of the Japanese proposals, threw an entirely new light on some of Tokyo's intentions and justified the belief of the American delegation that an agreement would be more possible on a basis of the Japanese plan than the British.

Salto made it clear that in America's future cruiser building program she could under the Japanese project scrap some of the numerous destroyers and put the tonnage thus saved into cruisers.

As any low limitation scheme would undoubtedly involve the scrapping of American destroyers because of their superior numbers the head of the Japanese delegation declared that by the transfer of destroyers tonnage, American cruiser power could be brought up to meet any American requirements.

But Salto emphasized that Japan wanted to keep her existing or contracted for strength in cruisers, numbering 32 with a total tonnage of 200,000. It is evident that on these figures the United States would be obliged to possess eventually some 30 high powered cruisers of 10,000 tons each, if it desired to keep the parity of 5-5-3, which was fixed at the Washington conference for battle-ships.

The admiral admitted that the Japanese plan allowed the construction of small submarines without limit, but contended that these were purely for the defense of Japan's extensive coast lines.

Even naval experts are having difficulty in their efforts to understand the exact meaning of the respective plans. That is why selected officers of each country will meet and endeavor to determine the exact purport of the American, English and Japanese projects.

As evidence of the confusion in the air concerning the exact meaning of the various projects, Admiral Field told the press representatives that the Japanese plan would give the United States only 15 cruisers, as against 29 for Japan and 61 for Great Britain.

Thus the British admiralty as represented at Geneva, seems to be unaware of the Japanese intention, as disclosed to the Associated Press, to allow the United States to transfer destroyer strength into cruiser strength.

Admiral Field tried to ridicule the American contention that fast merchantmen like the Mauretania could be converted into powerful auxiliary cruisers under the British plan by mounting six-inch guns.

"Why," he said, "they would merely be eggshell targets for any type of modern cruiser armed with guns of equal caliber."

But this quick dismissal of the importance of swift merchantmen is not accepted by the Americans, who insist anew that the British plan to reduce the size of cruisers would take the teeth out of the American navy, and for American purposes would render the American navy impotent.

Reuter's Tokio correspondent says that, while official reports on the opening of the tripartite naval conference in Geneva have not yet been received in the Japanese capital, navy officials in commenting on press reports express dissatisfaction at the American proposal to apply the 5-5-3 ratio to auxiliary vessels and disapprove the suggestion for abolition of submarines.

They also think it inadvisable to touch on questions already settled by the Washington agreement as proposed at Geneva by Great Britain.

BURGLARS IN FRIEDMAN'S TUESDAY NIGHT

Intruder Kicked in Lower
Panel of Back Window
and Helped Himself

The ready-to-wear store of Friedman's was burglarized sometime during the night. The intruder kicked in the lower panel of a back window frame, crawled thru the opening and unlocked the rear door from the inside. It is evident that the burglars had some small boy as an accomplice to crawl thru the opening made in the rear of the store, as it was not large enough to admit a full sized man.

It is not known definitely how much merchandise was taken, until an inventory has been taken, but an estimate has been made and nearly $1500 worth of goods was stolen. The merchandise consisted of summer dresses, summer coats, silk stockings, silk umbrellas and $3 in pennies taken from the cash register.

INSTITUTE AT TARLTON WAS INTERESTING

Session Was Held at Home
and Hospital, Presided
Over by Miss Porter

The Tarlton W. C. T. U. held its annual institute at the Home and Hospital Friday, June 10, with Miss Mary Porter, president in charge.

The meeting was well attended and full of interest. Messages were read from the national officers, Mrs. Ella Boole, president Mrs. Frances Parkes corresponding secretary; and Mrs. Margaret Munns, treasurer. "Holdfast and go Forward," the slogan for the year, was urged by Mrs. Boole; Holdfast to the victories and members already gained and go forward by gaining new members.

According to Mrs. Parks, leaders are just ordinary folks with extraordinary determination. Mrs. Munns believes that the W. C. T. U. is entitled to support, for it is safe guarding the homes of all the people and is patriotic and unselfish in its program. More money and unselfish in its program. More money is needed to carry on the program of work laid out by the national officers.

Mrs. Price then talked on the plan of work for the year, outlining the goals that must be met in order to be true patriots.

The noontide prayer was voiced by Mrs. Abbie Gussman. A bountiful dinner was then served and afterwards the program taken up again. Special music was furnished by Miss Mabel Valentine of Tarlton and the Adams Sisters, Stoutsville.

"Liberty, Within the Law" was read by Lucy Bresler. With the memory of former conditions still fresh in our minds, have we any real reason for presuming that those who manufacture and deal in alcoholic liquor would ever be contented to obey any law which interfered in any degree with their so-called "personal liberty?" The plain facts in the case are that it is principally those who desire to profit financially by defying law, who are by every means in their power inciting others to disobedience and then urging that the conditions which they themselves have purposely created are evidence that the law is unpopular, that it can not be enforced, that there is more lawlessness than ever and that the only remedy is to yield to the wish of the criminals and amend all law and concede to all persons the "personal liberty" to do exactly as they please.

Special readings were given by Mrs. Bess Long and Misses Nellie and Ruth Delong. Two letters were read showing the terrible conditions in the flood districts and appealing for both money and new and second-hand clothing. Mothers with new born babes, sleeping in tents on beds of sacks filled with hay. The task is a big one and everyone is urged to help.

The offering amounting to $7.68 will be used to buy materials for layettes to be sent to the sufferers.

BUILDING BIG GARAGE.

George W. Klingensmith and his son-in-law, D. A. Bowman, were given the contract to erect a cement block garage for the Wallace Bakery. It will be 36 by 36 feet and will be finished by July 1. It is being built on the rear of the Crist building back of the Moore shoe store and Clark's 5 and 10 Cent store. Ed Dalton has the contract for cement work.

MAULLER'S JOB STILL SECURE

Governor Withholds Proposed Attempt To Oust Chillicothe Man From Utilities.

Columbus, June 20.—(UP.)—Frank B. Mauller, Chillicothe, Republican, member of the Public Utilities Commission, whose term expired last Feb. 1, is secure in his position for at least another 18 months, Governor Donahey disclosed today.

"No attempt will be made to oust Mr. Mauller," Donahey said, when asked concerning reports that he contemplated attempting to name a successor to the Chillicothe man and have the legal question involved decided by the Ohio supreme court.

"My legal advisors all tell me that the ruling of former Attorney General Crabbe, to the effect that I cannot legally make a re-appointment, is sound and that nothing would be accomplished by attempting to oust Mauller."

"I have no desire to bring about a law-suit which would accomplish nothing, and consequently intend to make no further efforts."

Horse's Odd "Pickup"

MANY ENRICHED IN AUSTRALIA

Gold and Gems of "Never- Never Land" Brought Big Fortunes.

Melbourne, Australia.—In the vast Never-Never Land of Australia many surprises await the explorer. It is the belief of geologists that the mineral resources of that country have been barely touched and it is not improbable that other areas of gold nuggets scattered over the surface may be found, similar to the discoveries at Ballarat and Bendigo in the decade following the gold rush to California.

It was in 1851 that world-wide attention was attracted to the possibilities of the mineral richness of Australia by the discovery of gold in New South Wales. The first nugget weighed a little over a pound. The news spread slowly, due to the remoteness of the island continent from the other more settled parts of the world. But when the report finally reached the United States, many of the "forty-niners" of California made the long voyage to the antipode and joined with others in the rush to the new mining camps.

Nuggets of Enormous Size.

Excitement over the rich mineral discoveries was augmented from time to time by the finding of gold nuggets of enormous size and richness. The Ballarat district, in the state of Victoria, has the record of being probably the most remarkable locality in the world in the matter of yielding gold nuggets. These rich lumps of mineral were found scattered over the surface of the ground, and many prospectors panned up quick fortunes by the simple process of picking them up. It was at Ballarat that the famous "Welcome" nugget was found in 1858. It weighed 2,217 ounces and was valued at something like $40,000.

The "Welcome" nugget was not the largest lump of gold found in Australia, as seems to be commonly supposed. In 1860 an enormous nugget was unearthed at Mount Moliagul, near Dunolly. It was valued at $47,670. That was a pretty big fortune for a poor prospector to suddenly come across. It was named the "Welcome Stranger."

Record Mass of Gold.

Upon a claim at Hill End, New South Wales, the largest mass of gold ever found was dug out in 1872. In reality it was almost a nugget, as it contained but little quartz. The specimen measured four inches thick. It was valued at more than $65,000.

Many chance discoveries of gold and other precious minerals have occurred in western Australia and other parts of the country. Stories of prospectors and wayfarers who found nuggets and outcroppings in unexpected places, and the fortune that these discoveries led to, are told and retold to the visitor to the different mining camps.

The total yield of gold of Australia since 1851 is approximately three billion dollars.

Deserted Mining Camps.

There are several mining camps from which the glory of former mineral riches has departed. Notable among these are Bendigo and Ballarat, both in the state of Victoria. The riotous "diggings" of the earlier days have been replaced by substantial towns which depend largely upon other industrial and business interests for their support.

In Bendigo there are to be seen on every hand evidences of the mining activities that formerly prevailed there. All around the town are the holes made by prospectors and abandoned claims and mines which had perhaps yielded their owners fortunes in mineral during the halcyon days.

Throughout western Australia the problem of providing water for the mines and towns and the rural districts where attempts are being made to carry on agricultural operations has received practical consideration and solution on the part of the state government. The rainfall in a broad scope of territory is so meager that water from this source is scarcely counted on. The supply must be obtained from a long distance away.

Water Supply Scheme.

It was to overcome the perpetual droughty condition and to enable the development of the riches of the mines and soil that what is known as the Goldfields water supply scheme was conceived. It is one of the most daring engineering projects of its kind ever undertaken. Its consummation has been the means of adding enormously to the wealth of this part of the country. It has literally caused the "desert to blossom like the rose." The initial cost of the works was nearly $15,000,000.

This great water system supplies 31 towns by means of 100 miles of laterals and 300 miles of distributing pipe. Its lateral supply mains to mining districts are 69 miles long, and to agricultural districts 327 miles long.

The main reservoir is situated near Perty, close to the Indian ocean. It is kept filled by water drainage of a big area of country. Along the route of the main pipe line and the laterals are beauty spots of trees and other vegetation that have been created by the use of water obtained from this source. The precious fluid has enabled the creating of prosperous communities and towns and has been the direct cause of vast mineral development.

Precious Gems Found.

In some parts of Australia, particularly in Queensland and New South

Wales, valuable gems, such as diamonds, sapphires and opals are found in more or less abundance. It is in New South Wales that most of the diamonds have been found. Since 1851, when the first diamonds were discovered in Australia, this country has given a yield of the stones to the value of about $700,000. The sapphires of Queensland are of matchless beauty. They have found their way into the gem collections of many people in different parts of the world.

The principal district where these stones are now obtained is known as the Anakie field. It is situated about 200 miles west of Rockhampton, state of Queensland, and embraces a territory of 400 square miles. It is a wild, mountainous region that has been comparatively little explored and contains few permanent settlers. The sapphire miner pitches his camp in the desolate country, builds himself a washing bed and digs the gravel out of the banks of the dry water courses that run through the region. When the sand and dirt have been washed away it is an easy matter to pick out the beautiful gems. It is fascinating work.

Yields All Kinds of Sapphires.

The Anakie field yields every known variety of sapphire. These include the regal cornflower blue, the rich yellow and orange stones, the colorless gem that closely resembles a diamond, the true blood-red ruby, the royal-purple oriental amethyst, the silky cat's-eye and the shimmering moonstone.

The opal deposits of Australia are enormous—probably larger than any other country. In New South Wales opals to the value of more than $7,000,000 have been mined during the last 38 years, and the opal fields of Queensland also have a large record of production. It is in the remote and little known region of that state, more than 600 miles in the interior, that opals are found in large quantities. It is stated that the proved opal runs north and south for 400 miles and has a great width.

Bedford, Iowa.—Two aged lawyers here, one ninety-five and the other eighty-one, count a combined record of 127 years of legal practice and challenge any community to produce a pair to equal them.

L. T. McCoun, the elder of the pair, is in his seventy-first year of continuous practice. Born in Kentucky in 1832, he was admitted to the bar in Indiana after he had fought in the Mexican war. He came here in 1857.

J. P. Flick, the younger of the two, has practiced law since 1870. He is a Civil war veteran and has served two terms in congress, one term in the Iowa legislature and as federal attorney under President Harrison.

McCoun has lessened his activity in recent years, but still counts his clients by the score. He specializes in criminal law.

Ask Record of Kansans

Who Fought in 1776

Topeka, Kan.—Some Kansans apparently believe that Kansas, which entered the Union in 1861, was one of the original 13 states.

Oddly enough, those who have such a confused notion of American history are not unschooled immigrants. Persons desiring to prove their ancestry entitles them to membership in the national societies of descendants of Revolutionary war soldiers have written to the adjutant general of the Kansas National guard for the military records of their forefathers.

A jurist and the wife of a high school principal are among those who have suggested that their ancestors probably followed the colors of Kansas regiments in 1776.

Somerville, Mass.—When Mrs. A. M. Smith noticed smoke issuing from the basement door she sat down and wrote a letter to the fire department. The note gave her name and address, and set forth her suspicions that the house was on fire. A messenger was summoned and eventually the lieutenant in charge at the nearest fire station learned of the situation. When the department reached the premises the overheated furnace had cooled considerably.

Kills 10-Foot Shark

in Hand-to-Fin Battle

Wainu, New Zealand.—Charles Ferris of this city is the hero of a hand-to-hand fight with four sharks, in which "Old Kruger," who had been terrorizing bathers for years, was killed.

"Old Kruger" and other sharks had been coming close to the beach and Ferris determined to put an end to the menace. With pieces of stinger in a bag around his neck for bait he waded into the surf, carrying a harpoon to which a rope was attached.

Ferris threw bits of stinger ahead of him and four sharks, including "Old Kruger," fought for them. When Ferris got among the big fish he thrust a harpoon into "Old Kruger" and a group on the beach hauled him ashore.

The big fish weighed 400 pounds and was ten feet long.

GOOD-BAD NEWS FOR FARMERS

By F. M. Dinshofer, United Press Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, June 20.—American farmers may expect higher prices for their crops this year, according to leaders of the Chicago Grain Exchange interviewed by the United Press today.

Corn, especially, was predicted to reach heights not attained since war days unless there is a decided improvement in weather conditions throughout the country. Wheat, likewise, is destined for higher levels to meet the demand.

While farmers in certain territories may profit from the higher prices, it is doubtful whether the industry as a whole will be benefitted.

Constant rains, causing floods in many sections, and a generally late and cold spring have retarded planting and cultivating to an extent where excellent weather is a necessity until threshing has been completed.

Unless this weather materializes farmers will have very little crops for market, it is feared, and thus will not fully realize on the prevailing high prices.

Opinions of the various market leaders follow:

J. J. Bagley, of Logan and Bryan: "I look for generally higher prices throughout the market. Unless perfect weather prevails from now on until after threshing, exporting countries of the world will be unable to meet the demand. Demands of importing countries will be higher this year."

J. Cyark Dean, of Dean, Onativa & Company: "I am very bullish on corn. A right-about-face in weather conditions seems to be the only possible way of warding off higher prices. Wheat—well, I favor selling wheat on the bulges—but I'm very bullish on corn."

A. B. Babcock, of Babcock, Rushton & Co.: "We are of the opinion the present crop situation and prevailing demand will cause the market to rise considerably."

By Lee Gebhart, United Press

Staff Correspondent.

Washington, June 20.—Herbert Janvrin Brown, long distance weather forecaster, who accurately prophesied violent weather disturbances for 1927, now predicts further destruction for the remainder of the year.

An early winter, preceded by killing frosts, more tornadoes, a series of violent West Indian hurricanes some of which may rival in intensity the Florida hurricane of last September, severe hail storms, cloudbursts, more floods, and a markedly cool summer are among Brown's predictions.

The period from June 28 to July 2 will see heavy frosts in portions of the corn belt and as far south as the Ohio and Potomac rivers, extending to the Atlantic seaboard, Brown warns. This will be followed by "very dangerous frosts" from July 7, until July 11 over the same sections.

ICELESS ICE

Will Soon Be Used In Soda Fountains.

Although today's soda fountain is a marvel of mechanical ingenuity, there are still many changes in store for it, declares Norman S. Hall in an article in this week's Liberty. "Another soda-fountain revolution is promised," Hall asserts, "when experts now at work have perfected the solidification of carbon dioxide, a kind of iceless ice."

"Even now," the writer points out, "this substance is being used in ice cream containers and for shipments. A few months ago a firm in Long Island City, New York, successfully shipped a cargo of ice cream to Buffalo with no other preservative than this solidified carbon dioxide, which is 140 degrees colder than ice."

"A disk of this chemical weighing half a pound, placed, in the bottom of a quart container, will keep that amount of ice cream twenty-four hours. The day of the solidified carbon-dioxide soda fountain, experts assert, is about to dawn."

DISBARMENT PROCEEDINGS

Cleveland, June 20.—(UP.)—George H. Clark, former justice of the Ohio supreme court and once Republican state chairman, was permanently disbarred from practicing in the United States district court for northern Ohio by a ruling today of Federal Judge D. C. Westenhaver.

The former justice was found guilty of illegally removing the assets of the American Cycle Co. of Canton, a bankrupt concern, for which he was receiver's counsel.

The court's decision was rendered within ten minutes after the government had rested its case. It bars Clark from practicing in the northern Ohio federal court only. He is still free to practice in state courts and other federal courts.

Suits and Jackets Are Again in Milady's Favor

The one-piece frock and the long coat over it has been such a popular and becoming style for any type of woman that suits and jacket costumes have had little place for several years. Now they have come back in irresistible forms and materials. And the woman who does not succeed in adapting one of these jackets to her needs will be a very unusual woman and must needs be of a figure which needs more dieting and more exercise. The pretty jackets ought to be an inducement.

Whether the use of the jacket in sport or street costume is liked best each woman will have to decide for herself. And if she has any difficulty she will find the models for both so attractive that she will probably end by buying both.

The formal suit in black, navy blue or the light mixtures, braid-bound or not, is only part of the jacket mode. These for street wear are comfortable and modish and strictly tailored. Some women select them with gusto and then suddenly remember that the strictly tailored shirt is the usual accompaniment. Sometimes this weakens them in their decision. Tailored suits are one thing and the mannish tailored shirt and tie are entirely another. They are too stiff and severe for some types of faces and give other types a kind of overstuffed appearance. But provided for this season, as they are, in such variety as they have never been provided before, are delightful jumpers and overblouses to be worn with the suits.

Among the prettiest are the jumpers of the striped silks and wools, some knitted and very light. Several colors or a number of shades in one color are seen on a cream or other ground. Sometimes these stripes form only a border on the lower part of the jumper and again a band on the long sleeve. Many of them have the whole body striped with the plain sleeves and stripes on the lower part giving the cuff effect. All these jumpers and blouses are the slip-on kind and some of them have no stiff collars but are finished simply, either square or round. Once we would have thought them entirely too informal to be worn with the tailored street suit. The checked taffeta blouses are new for street suits.

This will be a season of contrast in color, but the larger woman simply mustn't give way to the prevailing tendency to go in for a skirt of one color and a blouse of another. Stripes, indeed, she can wear if she makes the most of their slenderizing effect by running them up and down. Belts, so popular with most of us, will be better for her if they are in the same color as her dress, rather than in a contrasting shade.

The heavily built woman should choose one of the darker and less noticeable shades for her dress, having it fit tightly but unobtrusively about the hips, and allowing plenty of movement everywhere else—in the blouse and the soft line of the front—over the shoulders—in the skirt with plaits or panels—and this will take pounds from her apparent weight.

Evening Dresses Longer in Back Than in Front

Summer evening dresses being shown in Paris include many with full skirts which are much longer in back than they are in front.

Mostly designed for young dancers, these frocks are made of tulle, chiffon and muslin. One model, much discussed, almost touches the floor in back, while the front lifts to a point just below the knee.

CLOSE GAME

Dropped By the Circleville Eagles Sunday at Reynoldsburg, Score 2 To 0.

The Circleville team was shut out again in a Central Ohio League game, when they dribbled away a game to the tail end Reynoldsburg team Sunday at the Burg, by a score of 2 to 0.

By virtue of winning this game Reynoldsburg passed the Birds, once more forcing them into the cellar position, where they are destined to stay for the remainder of the season, unless they show a better brand of ball than that displayed Sunday.

They have been weak in hitting all season and in the game Sunday they did not take advantage of what hits they did secure. They threw away a chance of scoring themselves and handed the home team the brace of runs which they got in the first inning.

That first inning was one of the most ludicrous exhibitions ever put on by a ball team drawing salary for playing. With the first two men nicely disposed of Cote gave the next two free passes to first. The next batter put a little pop toward first, Miller made a try for the ball on the fly, missed it and overran it. He recovered the ball and made a hurried throw to the plate to cut off the man scoring from second. The throw was bad and too late and the runner scored. Meanwhile the batter was digging for second and Adams tried to catch him but threw high, the runner was safe and another man scored while the play was being made.

Circleville's best chance was thrown away in the third. Adams led off with a nice hit to right center, but was cut down at second trying to stretch it into a double. Cote then followed with a hit which would have put Adams on third and Thomas went out on a long fly to left on which he could have scored. As it was, however, Thomas' fly was the second out and Cote made the third when he tried to steal home after pilfering third.

That is about the complete story of the game. The management of the Eagle team are threatening a shake-up and there may be some changes before the next game, two weeks hence, next Sunday being an open date.

BESIEGED BY CHILDREN FOR LOST DOG REWARDS

Physician Flees From Farmhouse on Claiming Canine When Faces Appear Everywhere.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—When Dr. Anton Kaufman set out at a farmhouse in the Marion (S. D.) district to reward the children of a farmer for finding and taking care of his lost dog he found children to the right of him and to the left of him as well as in front of and behind him. Incidentally, he accidentally discovered what may be the largest family of children in South Dakota. Even now he does not know how many children there were in and about the farmhouse, but he states there were plenty and to spare.

The physician was driving along a country highway in his car with his valuable bird dog occupying a place on the fender. While the motor was traveling at a rapid rate the wheels struck a rut in the road and the dog was hurled under the car. Fortunately the wheels did not strike it.

But the animal did not like such rough treatment and upon regaining its feet started off on a run across a pasture. It paid no attention whatever to the whistling and calls of its master.

Several days later the physician learned that his missing dog was at a certain farmhouse in the district. Supplying himself with silver dollars he went to the scene. It was his dog, all right, but he asked himself whom should he reward? George, one of the children, saw the dog in the pasture first. Henry, another of the children, had told the other tots about the stray dog. Frank, still another of the children, told them how to surround and capture the dog, so all of them had assisted in "taking up" the stray animal.

Six or seven boys were each given a silver dollar, and then several girl members of the family appeared for their share. He rewarded two little girls with silver dollars and thought he was through. But the door of the farmhouse opened and three or four more little girls appeared. As the physician prepared to take to flight in his car he says he saw two other little faces appear in the dining-room window and the rattle of a pail in the chicken house was taken as a hint that still another child wanted some of the reward.

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

RESERVATIONS TIME HAS BEEN EXTENDED

Time in which reservations may be made in the American Legion pilgrimage to France next September has been indefinitely extended by Howard
P. Savage, national commander of the Legion, following urgent requests from the field. The reservations will be accepted and handled to a date as near as possible to that upon which the big Legion fleet of 24 vessels will shove off for France, it was announced by National Commander Savage. Many factors make it imperative that Legionnaires planning to take part in the France convention pilgrimage should make reservations at the earliest possible moment, said Commander Savage.

"I would not wish any Legionnaire to be barred from revisiting the scenes of the World war and the cemeteries where our comrades lie buried in France," said Commander Savage.
"I cannot, however, urge too strongly that veterans planning to make the September pilgrimage make their reservations at once. There is now a variety of steamship accommodations and housing in Paris from which the veteran may make a selection to suit his taste and pocketbook. The space of the ships is rapidly filling, and some of the liners already have a full quota.
Especially is this true of two-berth cabins and accommodations for man and wife.

"Veterans who recognize these conditions and make reservations early will be able to obtain accommodation they desire, while those who wait will have to take what is left," Commander Savage said.

There still remain accommodations with state delegations. The steamship accommodations range in price round trip from $145.80 up on most of the ships, and from $151.50 up on the SS. Leviathan, flagship of the movement. The Legionnaires will be exempt from steamship tax and landing charges if they carry the official American Legion identification certificate. This certificate which will be issued for the nominal sum of $1 to those taking the trip will effect a saving of $20 alone in passport and visa charge if the veteran goes to France alone. Eighteen countries of Europe will accept the Legion certificate in lieu of passport and visa charge.

Fifty per cent reduction in United States, Canadian and French railroads to veterans having the identification certificate have been announced. The British, Belgian, Italian and German railways have likewise announced a substantial reduction in fares to the visiting Legionnaires. Remarkable savings on Paris hotel accommodations due to the fact that contracts were made by the Legion with the hotel men when the franc was low, are announced. Thirty thousand rooms in Paris are under contract.

Post Escorts Pupils on Visit to State Capital

The week after it completed a membership campaign which increased its membership 313 per cent and gave it second place in a state-wide contest, the Harry Howe post of the American Legion of Lynn, Ind., plunged into community service activities, taking the civics classes of Lynn and Spartanburg high schools to Indianapolis to visit the state legislature and state and national headquarters of the Legion.

Forty-five pupils were taken on the trip in automobiles provided by Legionnaires. D. J. Ferguson, principal of Lynn high school and a member of the post, and Raymond Sommers, post adjutant, led the group. Sessions of both houses of the legislature were visited, the pupils being shown how the laws of the state are made. A visit was also paid to the office of Governor Jackson. Later the classes were shown through the state and national Legion headquarters where the work of the Legion was described by John Klingler, adjutant of the Indiana department.

Massachusetts Legion
O. K.'s Blue Uniform

Navy blue won in a conference of Massachusetts Legionnaires held in Boston recently on the question of an official uniform for the department.
Seven models of uniforms were displayed. The type favored consisted of a blue overseas cap with gold piping and the Legion seal in gold, a single-breasted blue coat with brass buttons, brass numbers showing the wearer's post, brass letters "Mass."
on each lapel and a large Legion emblem embroidered on the left shoulder, and blue trousers with a gold stripe down each leg.

Obedying Instructions

"Oh—ah—by the way," remarked the doctor in some embarrassment, "how about that little bill I sent you last month?"
"Oh, yes," agreed the patient airily
"Well, you know you told me not to worry over anything."—The American Legion Monthly.

SALEM UNION MEETING WITH
MRS. MORRIS

One of the Largest Institutes in County as Sixty-One Persons Were Present.

The Salem Woman's Christian Temperance Union held a very interesting and successful institute at the pretty home of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Morris near Kingston Friday, June 17.

The morning session opened at 10:30 o'clock by singing, "Everybody
Sing." The president, Miss Mary Harpster, presided and Mrs. Anna
Rice had charge of the morning devotionals.

The welcome was given by Little Miss Doris Leist and "Good Morning" song by Misses Margaret and Tha Jane Bond and Betty Jane Evans followed a short business session.

Radio messages were read by the county president, Mrs. Lucy B. Price
by Mrs. Lillian Hinton and Mrs. Mary Bond.

The plan of work was then stressed
by Mrs. Price.

A recitation by Betty Evans and a reading by Miss Nellie Ryan was very much enjoyed. The morning session closed by singing "Beautiful Hour of Noontide" and prayer by Mrs. Mary E. Gray.

A delicious dinner was served at noon from the well filled baskets and was much enjoyed by all as well as the delightful social time which prevailed until the afternoon session at 1:30 o'clock which opened by a spirited song service with Mrs. Mary Bond at the piano.

The devotionals for the afternoon were in charge of Miss Mary Porter followed by a solo by Miss Margaret bond. The Union was fortunate to have with them Mrs. Van Vickie, county, social morality director; Mrs.
Cromley, county publicity director;
Mrs. Mary Gray, county Sabbath observance director and Mrs. Abbie Gussman, county contest director, who all gave very interesting talks about their departments. Mrs. Price then gave a beautiful poem entitled,
"Others."

Mrs. H. M. Crites gave a very interesting talk regarding the L. T. L. work and Mrs. Bessie Long told a beautiful story in connection with the Y. P. B. work.

A few minutes talk was given by Mrs. Prushing, Mrs. Lulu Marion,
Mrs. Hay, Mrs. Milligan and Miss Mary Porter which was helpful and inspiring. Music by Misses Margaret and Martha Jane Bond and Miss Betty Jane Evans followed by a Prosperity Tea party. A few remarks was given by our county president, Mrs. Price and the program closed with singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" and prayer by Mrs. W. S.
Fisher.

This institute will leave many pleasant memories in the minds of all who were in attendance as it was one of the largest local institutes in the county, sixty-one being present.

Visitors were from Circleville, Walnut township, Atlanta, Tarlton and Ashville.

Telescope 50 Years Old
Rebuilt and Modernized

Madison, Wis.—Scientific rejuvenation has rebuilt the six-inch telescope in Washburn observatory, at the University of Wisconsin, into the most elaborately equipped telescope of its size in the world.

The veteran of celestial exploration has served science for more than a half century and has drawn its share of fame because of service in important astronomical discoveries.

Its fame rests partly upon its use in 1870 by S. W. Burnham in the discovery of double stars overlooked by astronomers using much larger telescopes. At that time it was part of the Yerkes observatory equipment at Williams Bay.

In 1881 the telescope was purchased for Washburn observatory, and since has been used by astronomers of the state university. Here it was used by George S. Comstock, now professor emeritus of the university, in his celebrated determination of the aberration of light—the apparent shift of a star due to the motion of the earth in its orbit.

The old telescope has now undergone a metamorphosis in the university shops, and has emerged equipped with all the devices generally used only on much larger instruments, and with some new machinery invented by O. E.
Romare, university chief mechanician, who for eighteen years was a mechanician at the Yerkes observatory.

ton, were married Friday afternoon,
June 17, at the United Brethren passonage, Columbus, by the pastor, Rev. E. G. Spears. They will make their home for the present with his uncle, Mr. George W. Trimmer, and family, of 361 East Main street.

Sunday, June 19, friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr.
and Mrs. A. E. Clarry, of East Franklin street, in honor of Mrs. Clarry's birthday anniversary. Those present were Mrs. Clarry's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John Dunkle, and daughter, Josephine, and grandson,
Kenneth Eugene, Mr. and Mrs. Nolen
A. Dunkle of near Ashville; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bowman and daughter,

Mrs. O. G. Welch and sons, Maurice ger of Thatcher; Mrs. Artie Lucas, of Thatcher. All departed at a late hour wishing Mrs. Clarry many more happy birthday anniversaries.

Roses and brides! The words are closely allied for June, the month of roses, is the month of brides. It was a very pretty wedding, when at half after nine o'clock, Tuesday morning, Miss Mary Marfield older daughter of Mrs. Delano Marfield, of Columbus, became the bride of Mr.
Donald Morris, son of Mr. and Mrs.
J. Monroe Morris, of this city. There were no invitations, but friends were expected and quite a number assembled, in esthetic old St. Philip's church to witness the ceremony. The sanctuary had been decorated by girl friends of the bride. There were fragrant white lilies on the altar and in the window enclosures were baskets, filled with pink roses and tied with pink satin ribbon on the handles. The ushers were Messrs. Ralph Morris, brother of the groom, Henry Abernethy, Lawrence Jeffries and Paul Adkins. The service was read by the rector, Rev. Benjamin DeCamp.
Miss Louise Renick played Lohengrin's wedding march, on the organ
as the bridal procession made its way up the aisle. Miss Harriet Marfield was her sister's bridesmaid and only attendant. She wore orchid crepe, white shoes and stockings with large picture hat to match the color of her gown. Her flowers were a cluster of roses and daisies. The bride, who is strikingly handsome, was lovely in her gown of pink crepe and large picture hat. Her flowers were an arm bouquet of roses, blue lace flowers and swansonia. Her brother, Mr.
Elliott Marfield, of Goshen, New York escorted her to the steps of the chancel. Here she was met by the groom, with his best man, Mr.
George Florence McCrea, of Dayton.
The young couple will be domiciled at Kingsport, Tennessee, where, as a chemist, Mr. Morris is employed by the Mead Pulp & Paper company.
The groom on the maternal side is a grandson of Mr. Jonathan Florence.

A pre-nuptial, in the form of a porch party was given Tuesday evening June 21, by the bride's aunts, the Misses Harriet and Mary Marfield, at the old home on East Main street. About thirty young folk were present. But, to many of the older ones in the social world, there were echoes of the past in this merry occasion. This house, stored with treasures, which have been handed down in the family for generations, has always been presided over by those whose delight lay in having friends gathered thus about them.
Mr. and Mrs. William Marfield, the bride's grandparents and makers of this home, were outstanding in the art of their hospitality, a charm that is inherent in its present owners, the Misses Marfield. Mr. and Mrs. Elliot Marfield, of Goshen, New York and Miss Eliza Jane Beattie, of Paoli, Pennsylvania, came out for the wedding.

Chinese Caste System

The traditional Chinese social system reorganized four main classes below the priest-emperor, of which the first was the literary class. In the time of Confucius the education of the literary class included what was known as the six accomplishments—archery, horsemanship, rites, music, history and mathematics.

gain in volume even though a farm may be abandoned. While other income may fall very low or cease altogether, the timber crop continues to gain. This feature is important in maintaining the value of the farm in the face of the town industries which tend to lead the farmer away from agriculture and cause him to neglect his farm business.

Shirring Adds to Graduating Dress

Decoration Is Featured in Outfit With or Without Sleeves.

Waist-front, waist-back and skirt these three pieces are all there are to this shirred dress as planned for the June graduate, says Woman's Home Companion.

Perky lace for frills, satin ribbon for a sash and a soft sheer material such as batiste, organdie or voile were all taken into consideration in working out this design. It is distinctly a 1927 style. The shirring that gathers the front of the waist in two places and the back in one is largely responsible. So is the handling of the skirt fullness. It is concentrated across the midfront and given an apron aspect by several rows of gathered lace set on in panel formation. As shown, valencienne edging is used for these frills and for the single one that goes all the way around the skirt. The pointed neck is finished with insertion to correspond, set in flat at the front but gathered across the back so it fits close below the nape of the neck.

One of the nice things about shirring is that it adds to the fluffiness and daintiness of a sheer cotton without extra cost except in time. Yet shirring is not difficult. It might be defined simply as well-regulated gathering.

Pursuing the use of shirring further a fourth piece is added to the pattern in the second version for full sleeves that gives the dress a "peasant" look. They are shirred at the top and into tiny wristbands. Even the front of the skirt is shirred in this version of the frock. It would be delightful in crepe de chine or voile, with neckline insertion of embroidered banding. You can purchase these strips by the yard in most department stores.

Exquisitely Harmonious Are New Compose Effects

One would think that the possibilities of achieving new effects in frocks of the two-piece type had been exhausted. There have been so many variations of this popular style within the past year that it seemed impossible for its vogue to continue through another season.

The introduction of the compose theme into fashions has saved the situation so far as two-piece frocks are concerned. It has given designers a chance for any number of charming and new effects, and given the wearers of these frocks a chance for still further emphasizing their personalities through the medium of color.

In carrying out the compose effect it is not merely that different shades of a color are put together, but that the tones are so graded that the result is exquisitely harmonious. One finds this tendency even in clothes of the most informal character. The de-grade bathing suit of jersey, among the newest models, features a clever combination of three tones of blue, rose, green or beige, according to individual preference.

Concealed Fullness

The prediction of several seasons ago that wider skirts would bring a return to fatter figures has been disproved. Most of the French couturiers, while favoring fullness, so contrive the lines of their frocks that the bodice and hips fit closely, and the plaits or gathers appear suddenly, well below the hipline.

The members of the chamber of commerce were treated Tuesday evening to a novel entertainment, a series of moving pictures thrown on a screen by the Fleischman's Yeast company, of Cincinnati.

It was an excellent advertising stunt, showing the health giving properties of this wonderful stimulant to the digestive organs. All your digestive machinery in its workings was shown on the screen and if you had any doubts of the yeast being effective, these were removed by the illustrations given.

Secretary Harry G. Stevenson reported that his committee had erected twelve direction signs on the Jackson pike and before they had finished putting them up, tourists and farmers thanked the committee for their far-sightedness in placing the signs, as they are of great help to the traveling public.

Next Tuesday evening the members are invited to visit Marion Brothers vegetable growing plant. Emerson Martin will be the fellow to handle the pasteboards and his phone number is 150. Be sure and make reservations in time.

Karl Herrman asked members to avail themselves of the chance of giving a boy or girl, inmates of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' home at Xenia, an outing for the summer, by inviting them as guests in their homes for six weeks. The little folks would enjoy being out in the open for that length of time and you would enjoy having them with you.

R. L. Brehmer spoke on the fact of hard maple shade trees being affected by a parasite and lice. These can be gotten rid of by using Black Flag 40, a poison you can purchase in any drug store. It should be sprayed on the trees.

L. T. Shaner, a member, was reported laid up at home. He met with an accident last week and sustained several fractured ribs.

The Means at Hand

By AD SCHUSTER

(Copyright.)

IN A far-off province of India where men have time and are trained to think of possible villainy, Frank Lamson gave himself to evil thoughts. In this little hut on the frontier he was removed from the things he loved, from the men and women he called his kind, and from all example for good.

Here he was on the borderland, face to face with the shadows and mysteries. He could not trust his own servant and he knew the very air to be filled with danger. So he played with his paper weight, turning it over and over, and made plans for revengeing himself upon a woman.

He had loved her once and always would. Now that he was gone it was easy to make himself believe that had he stayed in England she would have learned to care for him. There came the chance for a career, the opportunity for fame and the return in splendor. With her refusal in his ears and desperation in his heart, he had set out, not knowing or caring for the future. Now he had time to think, time to regret his haste, and time to plan to get even.

Ellen had married. He had seen that in the papers some one had sent carefully marked lest the item escape his eye. And she had married Tom Wilkerson! Lamson remembered easily going Wilkerson and hated him. He wrote to friends for more details, had all the papers sent to him, and waited his chance.

One day he thought he saw the opportunity. A friend, the only one who would have written so, advised the soldier that Wilkerson was in hard straits financially. "He has the reputation of being big hearted, as you may remember," the letter went on. "Some shrewd men who know that kindness may be next to carelessness have him in a hole. Wilkerson woke up just in time, climbed half way out, but there he is sticking. If I had, say, two thousand pounds, I could break the man. You know I'm in a competing line and that I know what I am talking about. But I can't spare the change and, besides, he's your enemy, not mine. Just thought I would let you know that I'll do the work if you'll furnish the money."

Lamson with his arms sprawled on the wooden table in his hut played with the paper weight and tried to summon from his slender resources of money or friends the possibility of acquiring two thousand pounds. He would have to mortgage his future, sell his few possessions, and borrow to raise this sum. No time could be lost. Wilkerson was climbing out of the hole. Before long it would be too late to shove him back.

The man made a list of everything he owned and added the names of the friends who might be induced to lend him money. Then he wrote them all diplomatic letters each suited to the recipient, letters asking money. Impatiently he awaited the replies and as he waited he toyed with the paper weight on his table.

One after one the answers came and each he threw into the basket with disgust. They were all sorry, but you know, one's money does not go far in this country and . . . it was the same.

"They won't lend it to me, that's what they mean. They'd lend it to Winslow, or Thorndyke . . ." He sat up late in the night, calling aloud for an inspiration that would lead him to money, money with which to ruin Ellen's husband. It was then that the fever rode into the window and touched him on the brow. The hut held a sick man, and delirium, and the news went the route of the runners. It was Thorndyke who came to help.

When Thorndyke approached, the hut he was met by a frightened native, who gave him to know that Lamson had driven the servants from the hut and had been raving and shouting inside. The delirium which was an evil spirit had been more effective than the threats. The sick man was alone in his need.

Thorndyke broke in the door and there was Lamson at his table, the paper weight in his hand. But Lamson was dead. The fever had halted his plans for revenge.

"Poor fellow," said Thorndyke. "And it was just two months ago he asked me for a loan. Maybe, had I given it to him, he would have asked for leave and gone away where the fever would not have got him."

Then Thorndyke's eye fell on the dull colored paper weight. He held it to the light, then secreted it carefully in his pocket.

"A sapphire!" he said, and he remembered the story of the lost one of Malik Kaffur. "It must be worth easily three thousand pounds! And old Lamson never knew."

Veterinarians in Demand

Young men seeking professions are turning less and less to the veterinarian's calling, and Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the federal bureau of animal husbandry, which protects the nation's meat supply, among other things, is deploring the fact. The thirteen accredited veterinary colleges of the country are turning out scarcely enough graduates to supply the federal service, not to mention the needs of state and municipal services and the large field of private practice, he says.

AMUSEMENTS

"The Red Mill" Marion Davies' much heralded new starring vehicle" and the film version of the famous stage hit by Victor Herbert and Henry Blossom, lived up to all its promises when it opened last night at the Met theater. The new Cosmopolitan vehicle proves that comic opera, lately abandoned on the stage in favor of jazz, still has its charm—and that the drama of the lightsome plays of yore is just as gripping as the drama of any other story.

Incidentally it shows Marion Davies in a new role—a role different from any she ever attempted; more alluring, more charming, and, what is of more importance to audiences, probably the most entertaining in her history. Any talk of new faces on the screen doesn't apply to Marion Davies—every role she gives the screen is a new face so far as she is concerned.

Love Scenes Appealing.

Miss Davies' whimsical comedy talents find a ready opportunity in the new romance of the Land of Dykes; she romps thru a charming role in pigtailed and wooden shoes, dainty as a painted figure on a bit of Holland china; she does some acting that reaches the heights of genius in the dramatic moments which George Siegman, the villain of the new play her love scenes with Owen Moore are romantically delicate.

A notable cast supports Miss Davies in the new picture; a story of love and adventure, laid in Holland; a spectacular winter festival, a great church scene, a stirring adventure in boats on a canal in the huge Dutch village erected at the Metro-Goldwyn Mayer studios for the new picture; these are all interesting high lights in the production.

CONSTRUCTION COSTS DECLINED DURING MAY 1927

Washington, June 21.—Construction costs declined during May to a level slightly above the highest mark registered last year, according to statistics compiled by the Associated General Contractors of America.

During the past thirty months, the range of fluctuation has been comparatively narrow.

The decline last month is reported to have been the result of a drop in the average of prices of basic construction materials. The average of wages paid in the principal construction centers of the country showed no change from the position held in April. May was the fourth successive month in which the wage average has remained unchanged.

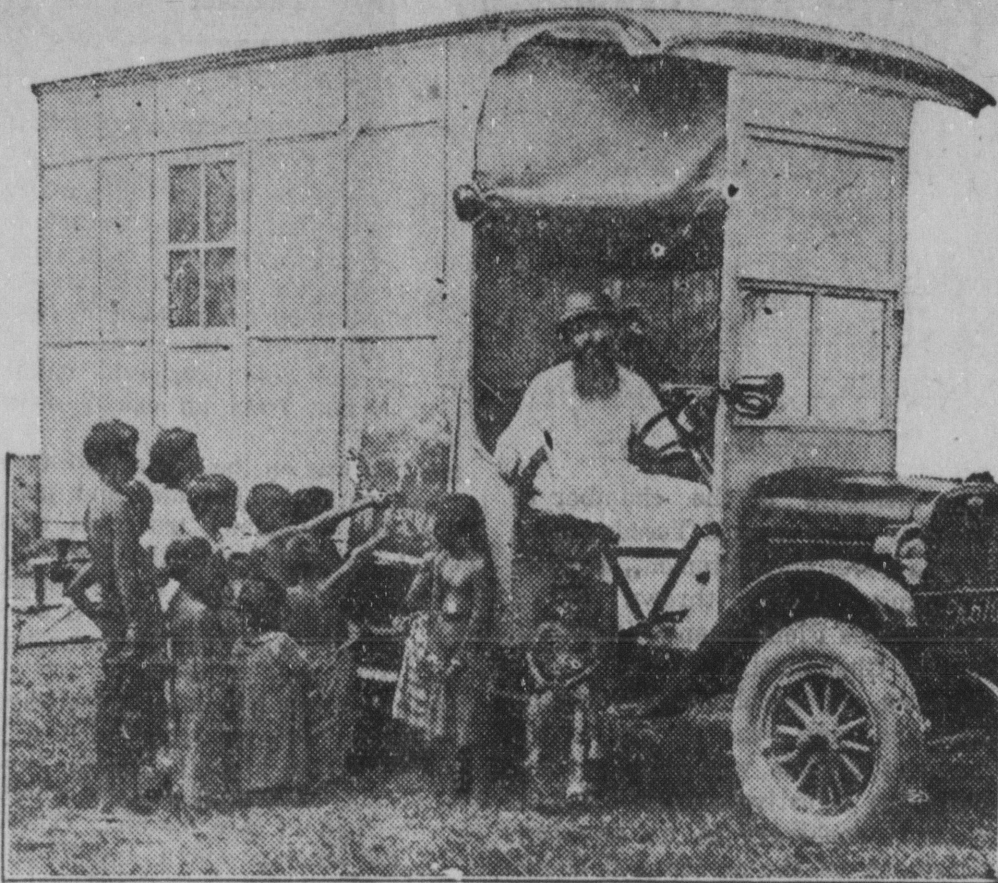

The average of total construction costs last month was exactly double the average recorded in 1913. While this position was reached at no time during 1926, more than half the months of 1925 saw costs holding a level as high or higher than the one recorded for May of this year.

The decrease in the average of prices paid for construction materials was caused by last month's lower prices for sand, gravel, stone and common brick in many localities. A scale which places the 1913 average of material prices to have held the 182 level, one point below the mark registered for April. At no time during 1926 was this level reached.

The index number for average wages paid in May was 227, a mark exceeded in only one month in 1926. It is interesting to note that changes in the average of wages have taken place only twice during the last twelve months. A slight decline last October was off-set by a small rise in February of this year.

Deep Sea Facts

In the depth of the seas there is eternal winter, with a temperature at about the freezing point of fresh water. Eternal night exists, relieved only by the fitful gleams of phosphorescent light. There is absolute calm and silence and no scenery, but a succession of undulations resembling sand dunes.

MISSIONARY TRAVELS IN AUTO-CHURCH

Father Riboud, a French Catholic missionary, believes in bringing the Gospel of God right to the door of the unbeliever instead of waiting for him to come and seek it. So he secured an automobile and equipped it with everything a chapel needs. Now he can minister to the soul-needs of the natives of the Dark continent. The photograph shows the exterior of the auto-church, with Father Riboud holding an illustrated Bible lesson to the semi-naked Malaisian children at Bukit Martajam, province of Wellesbey via Penang (Malaysia).

NEW SPARK PLUG IS MONEY SAVER

Small Investment at Proper Time Helps Make Larger Outlay Unnecessary.

Exhaustive tests by automotive engineers prove that motor car owners many times are compelled to spend considerable money to have their engines overhauled, and new parts put in, to overcome operating difficulties that could have been obviated had a new set of spark plugs been installed at the proper time.

More than 2,000 tests reveal that a complete new set of spark plugs at the end of each 10,000 miles of driving, or at least once a year, is actual dollars and cents economy. These tests have definitely shown that the saving in oil and gasoline alone, with new spark plugs, more than pays their cost within a few months, in addition to insuring greater general operating efficiency.

Change Plugs Regularly.

Motor car manufacturers, a few years ago, boasted of the long life of spark plugs. Today they are recommending in their instruction books that owners change their plugs regularly, even though spark plugs have been vastly improved in recent years.

It was formerly believed that a spark plug was giving efficient service so long as it continued to fire regularly. The engineering tests supplied overwhelming evidence that this was incorrect. The greater stress on spark plugs, caused by a combination of poorer gasoline and higher compression engines, saps their efficiency rapidly.

To secure full power from gasoline it is vital that the gas mixture in the cylinders be burned with tremendous rapidity. New spark plugs provide a sufficiently hot spark to accomplish this, despite the poorer quality of present-day fuels.

Causes Leakage.

Under this tremendous stress the electrodes become pitted. Carbon is burned on to the insulator and the shell. This causes a leakage of part of the current supplied from the battery, reducing the spark's intensity. Full power is not extracted from the gas mixture. Much good gasoline is wasted by passing out the exhaust. The longer the old spark plugs are permitted to remain in the cylinders the more vicious becomes the circle of poorer combustion, crankcase dilution and pitting of pistons and cylinder walls.

That is why manufacturers recommend that car owners install new spark plugs at regular intervals. To do so restores power and speed. In less than a year's average running there is a distinct loss which impairs engine performance. Then the owner may be faced with a bill for considerable repair work which could probably have been obviated had he renewed his spark plugs at the proper time.

Proper Steering Often Eliminates Bad Skids

Just why it is that so many motorists think of their brakes alone in connection with skidding remains a problem. Experienced drivers have said time and time again that they can take a car with bad brakes and prevent it from skidding through sheer good steering. But the average driver still clings to the idea that the skid is all a matter of traction and braking. When the streets are slippery and in dangerous condition, careful consideration always should be given to steering, with avoidance of quick movements in steering as the outstanding point. Make changes in the car's direction as carefully as you would apply the brakes, and if the car starts to skid, always steer in the direction of the skid, meanwhile releasing the brakes.

"Put on Your Chains," Is Advice to Autoists

Once you have bought chains for your car, use them. That is the advice of Charles E. Hill, vice president of the National Safety council. Too many motorists fail to do so, either because they are too lazy to put them on or because the process seems too difficult, according to Mr. Hill.

Chains are so simple to adjust, however, that they can be put on by children in very quick time. Some girl members of the headquarters staff of the safety institution recently demonstrated how comparatively simple it is to drape the chains over the tire, so that the hooks just about touch the ground at the rear; shove the car forward until the connecting hooks are about a foot above the road, connect first the inside and then the outer hook as tightly as possible by hand, and when the automobile starts rolling the chains loosen up a bit, which allows them to creep on the tire.

Auto Racers Refuse to Race With French Woman

Giving up a promising career as an opera singer, Mlle. Mozette, petite French automobile driver, now finds that men drivers refuse to race against her. Efforts are being made to match her against Jean La Costa, world's champion racing driver, of Los Angeles. Photograph shows Mlle. Mozette in her racing car.

Must Prove Innocence

The French automobilist in an accident is assumed to be guilty unless he can prove his innocence. The court of cessation, in a test case, laid down the principle that will guide automobile jurisprudence. Heretofore the theory that the person damaged by an automobile accident must prove the driver of the car to be at fault, has prevailed in many courts. Sometimes the same court decided differently in different cases.

AUTOMOBILE NOTES

More auto accidents are caused by defective brains than by defective brakes.

"Wrist pin" or "piston pin"? Which is correct? Both are used a great deal these days. Either is correct, but piston pin seems more accurate.

There are ruts at the bottom of most hills, warns the National Safety council, which advises motorists not to hit these ruts at too high a speed else they may lose control of the car.

Mental tests for automobile drivers to help decrease the number of accidents, are favored by the committee on the causes of accidents of the National Conference on Streets and Highways.

The sports editor should take over the auto casualties under the head of "The Human Race," for they are running even with births, which average five every minute for the United States.

GROW PLENTY OF TOMATOES

The tomato now enters into more articles of the family diet than any other vegetable, perhaps, except the onion. Even the babies eat tomato juice. No gardner ever had more tomatoes than he knew what to do with because if his garden produced more than he could use there is always a ready market among the neighbors. The bulk of the tomato crop comes from the early plantings. Late planted tomatoes give their big crop in September and October before frosts come and at a time when working in the kitchen in the preparation of catsups, chili sauces, and mixed pickles is less burdensome than in the hot days of August.

It is not too late to sow seed now for the late crop of tomatoes. The seed may be sown in the open and the plants transplanted to their quarters in early July. A constant succession of tomatoes is now easily within the possibilities of the home garden by a selection of varieties and early planting and the result usually is that the tomato crop is flagging in September. The late planted ones will then come in and continue the season until frost nips the vines.

Select early varieties for the late planting as they require a shorter season to come into bearing than the heavier growing later sorts. Tomatoes are not particular as to soil and can be overfertilized so that they run more heavily to foliage than to fruits. They do demand full sun, however, and plenty of moisture.

The best way to grow tomatoes beyond question is trained to stakes for both quality and quantity of fruit. They can be grown in this manner two feet apart, kept trained to a single trunk with only two or three main branches. Late planted tomatoes make rapid growth and the training should be watched and attended to frequently, pinching out unwanted side shoots and forcing the development of the plant into blossoms and fruit.

Sow a packet of tomatoes now for a late crop when the regular season is beginning to deteriorate.

Figures Show Women's Feet Getting Larger

New York.—Women's feet are getting larger. For generations the average size of the foot of the American woman has been 4B. But the average girl has outgrown this standard, say figures published by the Woman's Home Companion, and the average size at present is nearly half an inch longer and a full size wider than that of a brief decade ago. Athletics, dancing and much walking on pavements are advanced as the principal reasons for the increasing size of the feminine foot.

The O. M. C. Bridge Club

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

TED CARSON, sitting at his desk in the city, talked to Howard Fern over his telephone.

"Can you come out and play bridge with us tomorrow? It's our O. M. C. Bridge club and one of the couples can't come. You don't know any of them—but they're perfectly harmless. Yes, bring your tuck—and, say, you don't mind passing as a married man, do you? I'll tell you on the way out. And you can meet your wife at dinner. Madge wasn't sure who she'd get—it has to be some one the crowd don't know."

At about the same time Madge Carson called up Alice Gordon, an old friend who lived in the city. "My dear, I hope you won't think I'm dreadfully rude, but I'm asking you to fill in at bridge tomorrow night. It's our turn to entertain the O. M. C. and Clara and Bill have gone South. You see O. M. C. stands for 'Old married crowd'—though, of course, we aren't exactly old. Well, anyway, we made some fool rules and one of them was that we'd never have anyone belong who wasn't married—and no member is allowed to invite an unmarried stop gap. But really Ted said he'd get some friend of his and I said you could pretend you were married."

So it was arranged, and it was not until Howard Fern came downstairs with Ted for dinner after a hasty change from their business clothes that he knew that the girl whose husband he had been asked to impersonate was Alice Gordon whom he had met five or six times that winter in the city, and in all probability they would meet again occasionally. That was what made the situation a little more embarrassing. But it was agreed that they were to play the role of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Norcott.

After the cards were over the various members took places round the tables drawn together for the supper to follow, and sat while Ted and Madge Carson brought on the refreshments. Some one brought up the subject of proposals and Madge announced that she didn't think that Ted ever did propose to her.

"I certainly did propose," Ted answered. "We were at a Sunday school picnic and I'd been drinking pink lemonade, and we stayed behind the others in the grove—I can remember the mosquitoes. One stung me on the nose when I kissed you."

So that started it. It was moved, seconded and carried that everyone confess how he or she became engaged.

"Don't have the girls in on this," objected Madge. "Because they'd tell different stories and then we'd find out what liars our husbands really are. We'll just listen while you do the romancing. Gerald, it's your turn." So Gerald told briefly of his own proposal, and then came time for Howard—Mr. Bob Norcott.

"You'd better let Bob Norcott out of this," suggested Madge, a little nervously, but half a dozen of the men protested. Howard was in for it, and Madge and Alice waited with some concern. Howard showed no signs of disconcertedness.

"Isn't much to tell," he said smiling assuringly to Alice. "The only really remarkable thing about it was that she was willing to have me. You see I'd met her a few times and she—well, you know how a girl can treat a man without being at all rude. Snippet—I call it. I knew I wanted her and I sat up nights trying to think of a way to get acquainted. Then one night we went to fill in at a card party—much like the party tonight—and I knew right then that I'd got to ask her, and though we had both been asked to spend the night I asked our hostess if I could see her home. I thought maybe I'd get my courage up on the way. It was on the train going in to town that it happened. I never had an idea that she'd have me—" Howard looked up and across at Alice with a straight, eager look that made her blush. But somehow she rose to the occasion.

"You're as bad as the rest," she told him. "I was crazy about you from the first. I think I was I who suggested going home together and I'm sure I did the actual proposing."

Madge gasped her amazement, but no one noticed it, and the confessions went on. Then they finished supper and there was the usual leave taking and Howard and Alice were alone with their host and hostess. Howard said he thought really he ought to get back that night—and as he was going perhaps he could take Miss Gordon. So they started and on their way to the station a few minutes walk away they said scarcely a word.

"You are a very good actor," Alice said at last. "I don't see how you carried it off so well."

"I'm not an actor at all," said Howard without smiling. "You know what I meant. It was pretty hard, though, having to sit there and listen to you, knowing all the time that you were laughing at me."

Alice looked away from Howard toward the dark window. "Perhaps I meant what I said, too," she said.

"Then you really could think of me—you would marry me?" asked Howard.

Alice turned and looked at him. "Of course I meant it," she said and then she laughed. "Didn't I say I had to do the proposing—and now I think I really have."

GOOD PROGRAM WAS RENDERED AT INSTITUTE

Derby Union Met With Mrs. Ross Neff on Wednesday Afternoon, June 15.

The annual institute of the Derby W. C. T. U., was held at the beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Neff, June 15, with the following program:

Song—"America"
Prayer Mrs. Hays
Scripture, John 1-4; 7-21
Song—"Carry On"

Reports from different department were given by Mrs. Edwards, Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Christensen, Mrs. Ridgway and Miss Minshall.

Mrs. Cora Parks, county director of Bible in Public School was present and made quite an interesting talk.

Radio messages were received from Mrs. Munns, national treasurer, Mrs. Ella Boole, national president and Mrs. Parks, national corresponding secretary.

Mrs. Stump read a letter from Mrs. Ginder, county director of L. T. L. work, urging the Union to get the schools to cooperate with them and have the children enter the essay contest.

Mrs. Miller, a former pastor's wife, voiced the noontide prayer after which the members and guests were served a bounteous dinner, such as only the Derby Union can serve.

The afternoon session was opened with the song, "America, the Beautiful"; Mrs. Lena Leach, of Columbus a former member and now Franklin county director of Y. P. B. work, gave a splendid talk illustrating the work of the Y. P. B. and showing the W. C. T. U. how they must cooperate with the Y. P. B. and also their responsibility, if the Y. P. B. is to be successful.

This was followed by discussion and question pertaining to the work. The Prohibition tea party was participated in by twenty-three ladies.

The president then introduced a state speaker Mr. Eaky of Columbus whose subject was "America, Keeper of Keys," who gave a splendid, practical, explanation of the prohibition work. He told some of the things the enemies of prohibition are saying, then showed they were untrue. America is the greatest country in the world and our nation is known as the greatest Christian nation in the world.

Rev. Miller, former pasetor, gave short talk, after which the W. C. T. U., benediction was repeated by those present. Fifty-two adults and twenty-two children were present.

AMERICAN, BRITISH AND NIPPON PLANS

PRESENTED SO DIVERGENT AS TO BE IRRECONCILABLE

The United States Prefers Japan Proposal Over the British—Great Britain Proposes That America Eventually Abolish Ten Thousand Ton Cruisers—Japan Proposes That Yank Destroyer Strength Be Saved For Cruisers.

Never will the United States be forced into building small size cruisers unsuitable for the needs of her national defense—that, it is understood, is the answer which the American delegates will make to the British proposal at the tripartite naval conference for the eventual abolition of the 10,000-ton cruisers authorized by the Washington parleys.

The close of the second day of the conference at Geneva has permitted the experts to reaffirm their earlier judgment that the three plans presented—the American, British and Japanese—are so divergent as to be utterly irreconcilable and are certain to make a treaty impossible unless someone recedes from his original position.

Admiral Saito, however, in a statement to the Associated Press Tuesday night in which he explained the purport of the Japanese proposals, threw an entirely new light on some of Tokyo's intentions and justified the belief of the American delegation that an agreement would be more possible on a basis of the Japanese plan than the British.

Salto made it clear that in America's future cruiser building program she could under the Japanese project scrap some of the numerous destroyers and put the tonnage thus saved into cruisers.

As any low limitation scheme would undoubtedly involve the scrapping of American destroyers because of their superior numbers the head of the Japanese delegation declared that by the transfer of destroyers tonnage, American cruiser power could be brought up to meet any American requirements.

But Salto emphasized that Japan wanted to keep her existing or contracted for strength in cruisers, numbering 32 with a total tonnage of 200,000. It is evident that on these figures the United States would be obliged to possess eventually some 30 high powered cruisers of 10,000 tons each, if it desired to keep the parity of 5-5-3, which was fixed at the Washington conference for battleships.

The admiral admitted that the Japanese plan allowed the construction of small submarines without limit, but contended that these were purely for the defense of Japan's extensive coast lines.

Even naval experts are having difficulty in their efforts to understand the exact meaning of the respective plans. That is why selected officers of each country will meet and endeavor to determine the exact purport of the American, English and Japanese projects.

As evidence of the confusion in the air concerning the exact meaning of the various projects, Admiral Field told the press representatives that the Japanese plan would give the United States only 15 cruisers, as against 29 for Japan and 61 for Great Britain.

Thus the British admiralty as represented at Geneva, seems to be unaware of the Japanese intention, as disclosed to the Associated Press, to allow the United States to transfer destroyer strength into cruiser strength.

Admiral Field tried to ridicule the American contention that fast merchantmen like the Mauretania could be converted into powerful auxiliary cruisers under the British plan by mounting six-inch guns.

"Why," he said, "they would merely be eggshell targets for any type of modern cruiser armed with guns of equal caliber."

But this quick dismissal of the importance of swift merchantmen is not accepted by the Americans, who insist anew that the British plan to reduce the size of cruisers would take the teeth out of the American navy, and for American purposes would render the American navy impotent.

Reuter's Tokio correspondent says that, while official reports on the opening of the tripartite naval conference in Geneva have not yet been received in the Japanese capital, navy officials in commenting on press reports express dissatisfaction at the American proposal to apply the 5-5-3 ratio to auxiliary vessels and disapprove the suggestion for abolition of submarines.

They also think it inadvisable to touch on questions already settled by the Washington agreement as proposed at Geneva by Great Britain.

BURGLARS IN FRIEDMAN'S TUESDAY NIGHT

Intruder Kicked in Lower
Panel of Back Window
and Helped Himself

The ready-to-wear store of Friedman's was burglarized sometime during the night. The intruder kicked in the lower panel of a back window frame, crawled thru the opening and unlocked the rear door from the inside. It is evident that the burglars had some small boy as an accomplice to crawl thru the opening made in the rear of the store, as it was not large enough to admit a full sized man.

It is not known definitely how much merchandise was taken, until an inventory has been taken, but an estimate has been made and nearly $1500 worth of goods was stolen. The merchandise consisted of summer dresses, summer coats, silk stockings, silk umbrellas and $3 in pennies taken from the cash register.

INSTITUTE AT TARLTON WAS INTERESTING

Session Was Held at Home
and Hospital, Presided
Over by Miss Porter

The Tarlton W. C. T. U. held its annual institute at the Home and Hospital Friday, June 10, with Miss Mary Porter, president in charge.

The meeting was well attended and full of interest. Messages were read from the national officers, Mrs. Ella Boole, president Mrs. Frances Parkes corresponding secretary; and Mrs. Margaret Munns, treasurer. "Holdfast and go Forward," the slogan for the year, was urged by Mrs. Boole; Holdfast to the victories and members already gained and go forward by gaining new members.

According to Mrs. Parks, leaders are just ordinary folks with extraordinary determination. Mrs. Munns believes that the W. C. T. U. is entitled to support, for it is safe guarding the homes of all the people and is patriotic and unselfish in its program. More money and unselfish in its program. More money is needed to carry on the program of work laid out by the national officers.

Mrs. Price then talked on the plan of work for the year, outlining the goals that must be met in order to be true patriots.

The noontide prayer was voiced by Mrs. Abbie Gussman. A bountiful dinner was then served and afterwards the program taken up again. Special music was furnished by Miss Mabel Valentine of Tarlton and the Adams Sisters, Stoutsville.

"Liberty, Within the Law" was read by Lucy Bresler. With the memory of former conditions still fresh in our minds, have we any real reason for presuming that those who manufacture and deal in alcoholic liquor would ever be contented to obey any law which interfered in any degree with their so-called "personal liberty?" The plain facts in the case are that it is principally those who desire to profit financially by defying law, who are by every means in their power inciting others to disobedience and then urging that the conditions which they themselves have purposely created are evidence that the law is unpopular, that it can not be enforced, that there is more lawlessness than ever and that the only remedy is to yield to the wish of the criminals and amend all law and concede to all persons the "personal liberty" to do exactly as they please.

Special readings were given by Mrs. Bess Long and Misses Nellie and Ruth Delong. Two letters were read showing the terrible conditions in the flood districts and appealing for both money and new and second-hand clothing. Mothers with new born babes, sleeping in tents on beds of sacks filled with hay. The task is a big one and everyone is urged to help.

The offering amounting to $7.68 will be used to buy materials for layettes to be sent to the sufferers.

BUILDING BIG GARAGE.

George W. Klingensmith and his son-in-law, D. A. Bowman, were given the contract to erect a cement block garage for the Wallace Bakery. It will be 36 by 36 feet and will be finished by July 1. It is being built on the rear of the Crist building back of the Moore shoe store and Clark's 5 and 10 Cent store. Ed Dalton has the contract for cement work.

MAULLER'S JOB STILL SECURE

Governor Withholds Proposed Attempt To Oust Chillicothe Man From Utilities.

Columbus, June 20.—(U.P.)—Frank B. Mauller, Chillicothe, Republican, member of the Public Utilities Commission, whose term expired last Feb. 1, is secure in his position for at least another 18 months, Governor Donahey disclosed today.

"No attempt will be made to oust Mr. Mauller," Donahey said, when asked concerning reports that he contemplated attempting to name a successor to the Chillicothe man and have the legal question involved decided by the Ohio supreme court.

"My legal advisors all tell me that the ruling of former Attorney General Crabbe, to the effect that I cannot legally make a re-appointment, is sound and that nothing would be accomplished by attempting to oust Mauller.

"I have no desire to bring about a law-suit which would accomplish nothing, and consequently intend to make no further efforts."

MANY ENRICHED IN AUSTRALIA

Gold and Gems of "Never-Never Land" Brought Big Fortunes.

Melbourne, Australia.—In the vast Never-Never Land of Australia many surprises await the explorer. It is the belief of geologists that the mineral resources of that country have been barely touched and it is not improbable that other areas of gold nuggets scattered over the surface may be found, similar to the discoveries at Ballarat and Bendigo in the decade following the gold rush to California.

It was in 1851 that world-wide attention was attracted to the possibilities of the mineral richness of Australia by the discovery of gold in New South Wales. The first nugget weighed a little over a pound. The news spread slowly, due to the remoteness of the island continent from the other more settled parts of the world. But when the report finally reached the United States, many of the "forty-niners" of California made the long voyage to the antipode and joined with others in the rush to the new mining camps.

Nuggets of Enormous Size.

Excitement over the rich mineral discoveries was augmented from time to time by the finding of gold nuggets of enormous size and richness. The Ballarat district, in the state of Victoria, has the record of being probably the most remarkable locality in the world in the matter of yielding gold nuggets. These rich lumps of mineral were found scattered over the surface of the ground, and many prospectors pried up quick fortunes by the simple process of picking them up. It was at Ballarat that the famous "Welcome" nugget was found in 1858. It weighed 2,217 ounces and was valued at something like $40,000.

The "Welcome" nugget was not the largest lump of gold found in Australia, as seems to be commonly supposed. In 1860 an enormous nugget was unearthed at Mount Moliagul, near Dunolly. It was valued at $47,670. That was a pretty big fortune for a poor prospector to suddenly come across. It was named the "Welcome Stranger."

Record Mass of Gold.

Upon a claim at Hill End, New South Wales, the largest mass of gold ever found was dug out in 1872. In reality it was almost a nugget, as it contained but little quartz. The specimen measured four inches thick. It was valued at more than $65,000.

Many chance discoveries of gold and other precious minerals have occurred in western Australia and other parts of the country. Stories of prospectors and wayfarers who found nuggets and outcroppings in unexpected places, and the fortune that these discoveries led to, are told and retold to the visitor to the different mining camps.

The total yield of gold of Australia since 1851 is approximately three billion dollars.

Deserted Mining Camps.

There are several mining camps from which the glory of former mineral riches has departed. Notable among these are Bendigo and Ballarat, both in the state of Victoria. The riotous "diggings" of the earlier days have been replaced by substantial towns which depend largely upon other industrial and business interests for their support.

In Bendigo there are to be seen on every hand evidences of the mining activities that formerly prevailed there. All around the town are the holes made by prospectors and abandoned claims and mines which had perhaps yielded their owners fortunes in mineral during the halcyon days. Throughout western Australia the problem of providing water for the mines and towns and the rural districts where attempts are being made to carry on agricultural operations has received practical consideration and solution on the part of the state government. The rainfall in a broad scope of territory is so meager that water from this source is scarcely counted on. The supply must be obtained from a long distance away.

Water Supply Scheme.

It was to overcome the perpetual droughty condition and to enable the development of the riches of the mines and soil that what is known as the Goldfields water supply scheme was conceived. It is one of the most daring engineering projects of its kind ever undertaken. Its consummation has been the means of adding enormously to the wealth of this part of the country. It has literally caused the "desert to blossom like the rose." The initial cost of the works was nearly $15,000,000.

This great water system supplies 31 towns by means of 100 miles of laterals and 300 miles of distributing pipe. Its lateral supply mains to mining districts are 69 miles long, and to agricultural districts 327 miles long.

The main reservoir is situated near Perty, close to the Indian ocean. It is kept filled by water drainage of a big area of country. Along the route of the main pipe line and the laterals are beauty spots of trees and other vegetation that have been created by the use of water obtained from this source. The precious fluid has enabled the creating of prosperous communities and towns and has been the direct cause of vast mineral development.

Precious Gems Found.

In some parts of Australia, particularly in Queensland and New South

Wales, valuable gems, such as diamonds, sapphires and opals are found in more or less abundance. It is in New South Wales that most of the diamonds have been found. Since 1851, when the first diamonds were discovered in Australia, this country has given a yield of the stones to the value of about $700,000. The sapphires of Queensland are of matchless beauty. They have found their way into the gem collections of many people in different parts of the world.

The principal district where these stones are now obtained is known as the Anakie field. It is situated about 200 miles west of Rockhampton, state of Queensland, and embraces a territory of 400 square miles. It is a wild, mountainous region that has been comparatively little explored and contains few permanent settlers. The sapphire miner pitches his camp in the desolate country, builds himself a washing bed and digs the gravel out of the banks of the dry water courses that run through the region. When the sand and dirt have been washed away it is an easy matter to pick out the beautiful gems. It is fascinating work.

Yields All Kinds of Sapphires.

The Anakie field yields every known variety of sapphire. These include the regal cornflower blue, the rich yellow and orange stones, the colorless gem that closely resembles a diamond, the true blood-red ruby, the royal-purple oriental amethyst, the silky cat's-eye and the shimmering moonstone.

The opal deposits of Australia are enormous—probably larger than any other country. In New South Wales opals to the value of more than $7,000,000 have been mined during the last 38 years, and the opal fields of Queensland also have a large record of production. It is in the remote and little known region of that state, more than 600 miles in the interior, that opals are found in large quantities. It is stated that the proved opal runs north and south for 400 miles and has a great width.

Pair of Lawyers Have 127 Years' Experience

Bedford, Iowa.—Two aged lawyers here, one ninety-five and the other eighty-one, count a combined record of 127 years of legal practice and challenge any community to produce a pair to equal them.

L. T. McCoun, the elder of the pair, is in his seventy-first year of continuous practice. Born in Kentucky in 1832, he was admitted to the bar in Indiana after he had fought in the Mexican war. He came here in 1857.

J. P. Flick, the younger of the two, has practiced law since 1870. He is a Civil war veteran and has served two terms in congress, one term in the Iowa legislature and as federal attorney under President Harrison.

McCoun has lessened his activity in recent years, but still counts his clients by the score. He specializes in criminal law.

Ask Record of Kansans Who Fought in 1776

Topeka, Kan.—Some Kansans apparently believe that Kansas, which entered the Union in 1861, was one of the original 13 states.

Oddly enough, those who have such a confused notion of American history are not unschooled immigrants. Persons desiring to prove their ancestry entitles them to membership in the national societies of descendants of Revolutionary war soldiers have written to the adjutant general of the Kansas National guard for the military records of their forefathers.

A jurist and the wife of a high school principal are among those who have suggested that their ancestors probably followed the colors of Kansas regiments in 1776.

She Writes a Note to Say House Is on Fire

Somerville, Mass.—When Mrs. A. M. Smith noticed smoke issuing from the basement door she sat down and wrote a letter to the fire department. The note gave her name and address, and set forth her suspicions that the house was on fire. A messenger was summoned and eventually the lieutenant in charge at the nearest fire station learned of the situation. When the department reached the premises the overheated furnace had cooled considerably.

Kills 10-Foot Shark in Hand-to-Fin Battle

Wainu, New Zealand.—Charles Ferris of this city is the hero of a hand-to-hand fight with four sharks, in which "Old Kruger," who had been terrorizing bathers for years, was killed.

"Old Kruger" and other sharks had been coming close to the beach and Ferris determined to put an end to the menace. With pieces of stingaree in a bag around his neck for bait he waded into the surf, carrying a harpoon to which a rope was attached.

Ferris threw bits of stingaree ahead of him and four sharks, including "Old Kruger," fought for them. When Ferris got among the big fish he thrust a harpoon into "Old Kruger" and a group on the beach hauled him ashore.

The big fish weighed 400 pounds and was ten feet long.

GOOD-BAD NEWS FOR FARMERS

By F. M. Dinshofer, United Press Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, June 20.—American farmers may expect higher prices for their crops this year, according to leaders of the Chicago Grain Exchange interviewed by the United Press today.

Corn, especially, was predicted to reach heights not attained since war days unless there is a decided improvement in weather conditions throughout the country. Wheat, likewise, is destined for higher levels to meet the demand.

While farmers in certain territories may profit from the higher prices, it is doubtful whether the industry as a whole will be benefitted.

Constant rains, causing floods in many sections, and a generally late and cold spring have retarded planting and cultivating to an extent where excellent weather is a necessity until threshing has been completed.

Unless this weather materializes farmers will have very little crops for market, it is feared, and thus will not fully realize on the prevailing high prices.

Opinions of the various market leaders follow:

J. J. Bagley, of Logan and Bryan: "I look for generally higher prices throughout the market. Unless perfect weather prevails from now on until after threshing, exporting countries of the world will be unable to meet the demand. Demands of importing countries will be higher this year."

J. Cyark Dean, of Dean, Onativa & Company: "I am very bullish on corn. A right-about-face in weather conditions seems to be the only possible way of warding off higher prices. Wheat—well, I favor selling wheat on the bulges—but I'm very bullish on corn."

A. B. Babcock, of Babcock, Rushton & Co.: We are of the opinion the present crop situation and prevailing demand will cause the market to rise considerably."

By Lee Gebhart, United Press

Staff Correspondent.

Washington, June 20.—Herbert Janvin Brown, long distance weather forecaster, who accurately prophesied violent weather disturbances for 1927, now predicts further destruction for the remainder of the year.

An early winter, preceded by killing frosts, more tornadoes, a series of violent West Indian hurricanes some of which may rival in intensity the Florida hurricane of last September, severe hail storms, cloudbursts, more floods, and a markedly cool summer are among Brown's predictions.

The period from June 28 to July 2 will see heavy frosts in portions of the corn belt and as far south as the Ohio and Potomac rivers, extending to the Atlantic seaboard, Brown warns. This will be followed by "very dangerous frosts" from July 7, until July 11 over the same sections.

ICELESS ICE

Will Soon Be Used In Soda Fountains.

Although today's soda fountain is a marvel of mechanical ingenuity, there are still many changes in store for it, declares Norman S. Hall in an article in this week's Liberty. "Another soda-fountain revolution is promised," Hall asserts, "when experts now at work have perfected the solidification of carbon dioxide, a kind of iceless ice."

"Even now," the writer points out, "this substance is being used in ice cream containers and for shipments. A few months ago a firm in Long Island City, New York, successfully shipped a cargo of ice cream to Buffalo with no other preservative than this solidified carbon dioxide, which is 140 degrees colder than ice."

"A disk of this chemical weighing half a pound, placed in the bottom of a quart container, will keep that amount of ice cream twenty-four hours. The day of the solidified carbon-dioxide soda fountain, experts assert, is about to dawn."

Lengthy Humans

There have been reports among the less civilized tribes and among certain savage peoples that men have measured as much as 15 feet. From actual records that have been compiled, the greatest height found was that of Topinard's Finlander, who measured 112 inches.

Oriental Delicacy

One of the most delicious vegetables used in great quantities in the Orient and now being introduced into this country is the young bamboo shoot. Chinese consider the tiny shoots of the bamboo a delicacy. In many respects the bamboo is not unlike asparagus.

DISBARMENT PROCEEDINGS

Cleveland, June 20.—(U.P.)—George H. Clark, former justice of the Ohio supreme court and once Republican state chairman, was permanently disbarred from practicing in the United States district court for northern Ohio by a ruling today of Federal Judge D. C. Westenhaver.

The former justice was found guilty of illegally removing the assets of the American Cycle Co. of Canton, a bankrupt concern, for which he was receiver's counsel.

The court's decision was rendered within ten minutes after the government had rested its case. It bars Clark from practicing in the northern Ohio federal court only. He is still free to practice in state courts and other federal courts.

Suits and Jackets Are Again in Milady's Favor

The one-piece frock and the long coat over it has been such a popular and becoming style for any type of woman that suits and jacket costumes have had little place for several years. Now they have come back in irresistible forms and materials. And the woman who does not succeed in adapting one of these jackets to her needs will be a very unusual woman and must needs be of a figure which needs more dieting and more exercise. The pretty jackets ought to be an inducement.

Whether the use of the jacket in sport or street costume is liked best each woman will have to decide for herself. And if she has any difficulty she will find the models for both so attractive that she will probably end by buying both.

The formal suit in black, navy blue or the light mixtures, braid-bound or not, is only part of the jacket mode. These for street wear are comfortable and modish and strictly tailored. Some women select them with gusto and then suddenly remember that the strictly tailored shirt is the usual accompaniment. Sometimes this weakens them in their decision. Tailored suits are one thing and the mannish tailored shirt and tie are entirely another. They are too stiff and severe for some types of faces and give other types a kind of overstuffed appearance. But provided for this season, as they are, in such variety as they have never been provided before, are delightful jumpers and overblouses to be worn with the suits.

Among the prettiest are the jumpers of the striped silks and wools, some knitted and very light. Several colors or a number of shades in one color are seen on a cream or other ground. Sometimes these stripes form only a border on the lower part of the jumper and again a band on the long sleeve. Many of them have the whole body striped with the plain sleeves and stripes on the lower part giving the cuff effect. All these jumpers and blouses are the slip-on kind and some of them have no stiff collars but are finished simply, either square or round. Once we would have thought them entirely too informal to be worn with the tailored street suit. The checked taffeta blouses are new for street suits.

This will be a season of contrast in color, but the larger woman simply mustn't give way to the prevailing tendency to go in for a skirt of one color and a blouse of another. Stripes, indeed, she can wear if she makes the most of their slenderizing effect by running them up and down. Belts, so popular with most of us, will be better for her if they are in the same color as her dress, rather than in a contrasting shade.

The heavily built woman should choose one of the darker and less noticeable shades for her dress, having it fit tightly but unobtrusively about the hips, and allowing plenty of movement everywhere else—in the bloused back and the soft line of the front—over the shoulders—in the skirt with plaits or panels—and this will take pounds from her apparent weight.

Evening Dresses Longer in Back Than in Front

Summer evening dresses being shown in Paris include many with full skirts which are much longer in back than they are in front.

Mostly designed for young dancers, these frocks are made of tulle, chiffon and muslin. One model, much discussed, almost touches the floor in back, while the front lifts to a point just below the knee.

Actress Wears Coat of Snaky Mode—Faille Silk

Natli Barr, Parisian film actress, wears this coat of heavy faille silk woven in simulation of the pattern of the skin of the boa constrictor.

CLOSE GAME

Dropped By the Circleville Eagles Sunday at Reynoldsburg, Score 2 To 0.

The Circleville team was shut out again in a Central Ohio League game, when they dribbled away a game to the tail end Reynoldsburg team Sunday at the Burg, by a score of 2 to 0.

By virtue of winning this game Reynoldsburg passed the Birds, once more forcing them into the cellar position, where they are destined to stay for the remainder of the season, unless they show a better brand of ball than that displayed Sunday.

They have been weak in hitting all season and in the game Sunday they did not take advantage of what hits they did secure. They threw away a chance of scoring themselves and handed the home team the brace of runs which they got in the first inning.

That first inning was one of the most ludicrous exhibitions ever put on by a ball team drawing salary for playing. With the first two men nicely disposed of Cote gave the next two free passes to first. The next batter put a little pop toward first, Miller made a try for the ball on the fly, missed it and overran it. He recovered the ball and made a hurried throw to the plate to cut off the man scoring from second. The throw was bad and too late and the runner scored. Meanwhile the batter was digging for second and Adams tried to catch him but threw high, the runner was safe and another man scored while the play was being made.

Circleville's best chance was thrown away in the third. Adams led off with a nice hit to right center, but was cut down at second trying to stretch it into a double. Cote then followed with a hit which would have put Adams on third and Thomas went out on a long fly to left on which he could have scored. As it was, however, Thomas' fly was the second out and Cote made the third when he tried to steal home after pilfering third.

That is about the complete story of the game. The management of the Eagle team are threatening a shake-up and there may be some changes before the next game, two weeks hence, next Sunday being an open date.

BESIEGED BY CHILDREN FOR LOST DOG REWARDS

Physician Flees From Farmhouse on Claiming Canine When Faces Appear Everywhere.

Sioux Falls, S. D.—When Dr. Anton Kaufman set out at a farmhouse in the Marion (S. D.) district to reward the children of a farmer for finding and taking care of his lost dog he found children to the right of him and to the left of him as well as in front of and behind him. Incidentally, he accidentally discovered what may be the largest family of children in South Dakota. Even now he does not know how many children there were in and about the farmhouse, but he states there were plenty and to spare.

The physician was driving along a country highway in his car with his valuable bird dog occupying a place on the fender. While the motor was traveling at a rapid rate the wheels struck a rut in the road and the dog was hurled under the car. Fortunately the wheels did not strike it.

But the animal did not like such rough treatment and upon regaining its feet started off on a run across a pasture. It paid no attention whatever to the whistling and calls of its master.

Several days later the physician learned that his missing dog was at a certain farmhouse in the district. Supplying himself with silver dollars he went to the scene. It was his dog, all right, but he asked himself whom should he reward? George, one of the children, saw the dog in the pasture first. Henry, another of the children, had told the other tots about the stray dog. Frank, still another of the children, told them how to surround and capture the dog, so all of them had assisted in "taking up" the stray animal.

Six or seven boys were each given a silver dollar, and then several girl members of the family appeared for their share. He rewarded two little girls with silver dollars and thought he was through. But the door of the farmhouse opened and three or four more little girls appeared. As the physician prepared to take to flight in his car he says he saw two other little faces appear in the dining-room window and the rattle of a pail in the chicken house was taken as a hint that still another child wanted some of the reward.

The AMERICAN LEGION

(Copy for This Department Supplied by the American Legion News Service.)

RESERVATIONS TIME HAS BEEN EXTENDED

Time in which reservations may be made in the American Legion pilgrimage to France next September has been indefinitely extended by Howard P. Savage, national commander of the Legion, following urgent requests from the field. The reservations will be accepted and handled to a date as near as possible to that upon which the big Legion fleet of 24 vessels will shove off for France. It was announced by National Commander Savage. Many factors make it imperative that Legionnaires planning to take part in the France convention pilgrimage should make reservations at the earliest possible moment, said Commander Savage.

"I would not wish any Legionnaire to be barred from revisiting the scenes of the World war and the cemeteries where our comrades lie buried in France," said Commander Savage. "I cannot, however, urge too strongly that veterans planning to make the September pilgrimage make their reservations at once. There is now a variety of steamship accommodations and housing in Paris from which the veteran may make a selection to suit his taste and pocketbook. The space of the ships is rapidly filling, and some of the liners already have a full quota. Especially is this true of two-berth cabins and accommodations for man and wife.

"Veterans who recognize these conditions and make reservations early will be able to obtain accommodation they desire, while those who wait will have to take what is left," Commander Savage said.

There still remain accommodations with state delegations. The steamship accommodations range in price round trip from $145.80 up on most of the ships, and from $151.50 up on the SS. Leviathan, flagship of the movement. The Legionnaires will be exempt from steamship tax and landing charges if they carry the official American Legion identification certificate. This certificate which will be issued for the nominal sum of $1 to those taking the trip will effect a saving of $20 alone in passport and visa charge if the veteran goes to France alone. Eighteen countries of Europe will accept the Legion certificate in lieu of passport and visa charge.

Fifty per cent reduction in United States, Canadian and French railroads to veterans having the identification certificate have been announced. The British, Belgian, Italian and German railways have likewise announced a substantial reduction in fares to the visiting Legionnaires. Remarkable savings on Paris hotel accommodations due to the fact that contracts were made by the Legion with the hotel men when the franc was low, are announced. Thirty thousand rooms in Paris are under contract.

Post Escorts Pupils on Visit to State Capital

The week after it completed a membership campaign which increased its membership 313 per cent and gave it second place in a state-wide contest, the Harry Howe post of the American Legion of Lynn, Ind., plunged into community service activities, taking the civics classes of Lynn and Spartanburg high schools to Indianapolis to visit the state legislature and state and national headquarters of the Legion.

Forty-five pupils were taken on the trip in automobiles provided by Legionnaires. D. J. Ferguson, principal of Lynn high school and a member of the post, and Raymond Sommers, post adjutant, led the group. Sessions of both houses of the legislature were visited, the pupils being shown how the laws of the state are made. A visit was also paid to the office of Governor Jackson. Later the classes were shown through the state and national Legion headquarters where the work of the Legion was described by John Klingler, adjutant of the Indiana department.

Massachusetts Legion O. K.'s Blue Uniform

Navy blue won in a conference of Massachusetts Legionnaires held in Boston recently on the question of an official uniform for the department. Seven models of uniforms were displayed. The type favored consisted of a blue overseas cap with gold piping and the Legion seal in gold, a single-breasted blue coat with brass buttons, brass numbers showing the wearer's post, brass letters "Mass." on each lapel and a large Legion emblem embroidered on the left shoulder, and blue trousers with a gold stripe down each leg.

Obedient Instructions

"Oh—ah—by the way," remarked the doctor in some embarrassment, "how about that little bill I sent you last month?"
"Oh, yes," agreed the patient airily. "Well, you know you told me not to worry over anything."—The American Legion Monthly.

SALEM UNION MEETING WITH MRS. MORRIS

One of the Largest Institutes in County as Sixty-One Persons Were Present.

The Salem Woman's Christian Temperance Union held a very interesting and successful institute at the pretty home of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Morris near Kingston Friday, June 17.

The morning session opened at 10:30 o'clock by singing, "Everybody Sing." The president, Miss Mary Harpster, presided and Mrs. Anna Rice had charge of the morning devotionals.

The welcome was given by Little Miss Doris Leist and "Good Morning" song by Misses Margaret and Martha Jane Bond and Betty Jane Evans followed a short business session.

Radio messages were read by the county president, Mrs. Lucy B. Price by Mrs. Lillian Hinton and Mrs. Mary Bond.

The plan of work was then stressed by Mrs. Price.

A recitation by Betty Evans and a reading by Miss Nellie Ryan was very much enjoyed. The morning session closed by singing "Beautiful Hour of Noontide" and prayer by Mrs. Mary E. Gray.

A delicious dinner was served at noon from the well filled baskets and was much enjoyed by all as well as the delightful social time which prevailed until the afternoon session at 1:30 o'clock which opened by a spirited song service with Mrs. Mary Bond at the piano.

The devotionals for the afternoon were in charge of Miss Mary Porter followed by a solo by Miss Margaret bond. The Union was fortunate to have with them Mrs. Van Vickle, county, social morality director; Mrs. Cromley, county publicity director; Mrs. Mary Gray, county Sabbath observance director and Mrs. Abbie Gussman, county contest director, who all gave very interesting talks about their departments. Mrs. Price then gave a beautiful poem entitled, "Others."

Mrs. H. M. Crites gave a very interesting talk regarding the L. T. L. work and Mrs. Bessie Long told a beautiful story in connection with the Y. P. B. work.

A few minutes talk was given by Mrs. Prushing, Mrs. Lulu Marion, Mrs. Hay, Mrs. Milligan and Miss Mary Porter which was helpful and inspiring. Music by Misses Margaret and Martha Jane Bond and Miss Betty Jane Evans followed by a Prosperity Tea party. Telescope 50 Years Old Rebuilt and Modernized

Madison, Wis.—Scientific rejuvenation has rebuilt the six-inch telescope in Washburn observatory, at the University of Wisconsin. Into the most elaborately equipped telescope of its size in the world.

The veteran of celestial exploration has served science for more than a half century and has drawn its share of fame because of service in important astronomical discoveries.

Its fame rests partly upon its use in 1870 by S. W. Burnham in the discovery of double stars overlooked by astronomers using much larger telescopes. At that time it was part of the Yerkes observatory equipment at Williams Bay.

In 1881 the telescope was purchased for Washburn observatory, and since has been used by astronomers of the state university. Here it was used by George S. Comstock, now professor emeritus of the university. In his celebrated determination of the aberration of light—the apparent shift of a star due to the motion of the earth in its orbit.

The old telescope has now undergone a metamorphosis in the university shops, and has emerged equipped with all the devices generally used only on much larger instruments, and with some new machinery invented by O. E. Fomare, university chief mechanic, who for eighteen years was a mechanic at the Yerkes observatory.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Warner entertained to a six o'clock dinner Tuesday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Homer Thornton and daughter, Jane, and Willis Warner, of Portsmouth.

Mrs. Stanley Stevenson, Watt and Pickaway streets, gave a tea Tuesday afternoon at her home in honor of Mrs. Martin Averill and her daughter, Miss Margaret, of Frankfort, Kentucky, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Stevenson, of Rose Terrace. The home was most artistically decorated in the season's flowers. Sixteen guests were entertained.

Mr. Thomas Trimmer, of Orland, Ohio, and Dr. Mary Roberts, of Tarlton, were married Friday afternoon, June 17, at the United Brethren parsonage, Columbus, by the pastor, Rev. E. G. Spears. They will make their home for the present with his uncle, Mr. George W. Trimmer, and family, of 361 East Main street.

Sunday, June 19, friends and relatives gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Clarry, of East Franklin street, in honor of Mrs. Clarry's birthday anniversary. Those present were Mrs. Clarry's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John Dunkle, and daughter, Josephine, and grandson, Kenneth Eugene, Mr. and Mrs. Nolen A. Dunkle of near Ashville; Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bowman and daughter, Norma Jean, of Lancaster; Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Welch and sons, Maurice and Lloyd, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Metzger of Thatcher; Mrs. Artie Lucas, of Circleville and Mr. Donald Barnes, of Thatcher. All departed at a late hour wishing Mrs. Clarry many more happy birthday anniversaries.

Roses and brides! The words are closely allied for June, the month of roses, is the month of brides. It was a very pretty wedding, when at half after nine o'clock, Tuesday morning, Miss Mary Marfield older daughter of Mrs. Delano Marfield, of Columbus, became the bride of Mr. Donald Morris, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Monroe Morris, of this city. There were no invitations, but friends were expected and quite a number assembled, in esthetic old St. Philip's church to witness the ceremony. The sanctuary had been decorated by girl friends of the bride. There were fragrant white lilies on the altar and in the window enclosures were baskets, filled with pink roses and tied with pink satin ribbon on the handles. The ushers were Messrs. Ralph Morris, brother of the groom, Henry Abernethy, Lawrence Jeffries and Paul Adkins. The service was read by the rector, Rev. Benjamin DeCamp. Miss Louise Renick played Lohengrin's wedding march, on the organ as the bridal procession made its way up the aisle. Miss Harriet Marfield was her sister's bridesmaid and only attendant. She wore orchid crepe, white shoes and stockings with large picture hat to match the color of her gown. Her flowers were a cluster of roses and daisies. The bride, who is strikingly handsome, was lovely in her gown of pink crepe and large picture hat. Her flowers were an arm bouquet of roses, blue lace flowers and swansonia. Her brother, Mr. Elliott Marfield, of Goshen, New York escorted her to the steps of the chancel. Here she was met by the groom, with his best man, Mr. George Florence McCrea, of Dayton. The young couple will be domiciled at Kingsport, Tennessee, where, as a chemist, Mr. Morris is employed by the Mead Pulp & Paper company. The groom on the maternal side is a grandson of Mr. Jonathan Florence.

A pre-nuptial, in the form of a porch party was given Tuesday evening June 21, by the bride's aunts, the Misses Harriet and Mary Marfield, at the old home on East Main street. About thirty young folk were present. But, to many of the older ones in the social world, there were echoes of the past in this merry occasion. This house, stored with treasures, which have been handed down in the family for generations, has always been presided over by those whose delight lay in having friends gathered thus about them. Mr. and Mrs. William Marfield, the bride's grandparents and makers of this home, were outstanding in the art of their hospitality, a charm that is inherent in its present owners, the Misses Marfield. Mr. and Mrs. Elliot Marfield, of Goshen, New York and Miss Eliza Jane Beattie, of Paoli, Pennsylvania, came out for the wedding.

Grow a Timber Crop

Remember that wood and timber gain in volume even though a farm may be abandoned. While other income may fall very low or cease altogether, the timber crop continues to gain. This feature is important in maintaining the value of the farm in the face of the town industries which tend to lead the farmer away from agriculture and cause him to neglect his farm business.

Shirring Adds to Graduating Dress

Decoration Is Featured in Outfit With or Without Sleeves.

Waist-front, waist-back and skirt, these three pieces are all there are to this shirred dress as planned for the June graduate, says Woman's Home Companion.

Perky lace for frills, satin ribbon for a sash and a soft sheer material such as batiste, organdie or voile were all taken into consideration in working out this design. It is distinctly a 1927 style. The shirring that gathers the front of the waist in two places and the back in one is largely responsible. So is the handling of the skirt fullness. It is concentrated across the midfront and given an apron aspect by several rows of gathered lace set on in panel formation. As shown, Valenciennes edging is used for these frills and for the single one that goes all the way around the skirt. The pointed neck is finished with insertion to correspond, set in flat at the front but gathered across the back so it fits close below the nape of the neck.

One of the nice things about shirring is that it adds to the fluffiness and daintiness of a sheer cotton without extra cost except in time. Yet shirring is not difficult. It might be defined simply as well-regulated gathering.

Pursuing the use of shirring further a fourth piece is added to the pattern in the second version for full sleeves that gives the dress a "peasant" look. They are shirred at the top and into tiny wristbands. Even the front of the skirt is shirred in this version of the frock. It would be delightful in crepe de chine or voile, with neckline insertion of embroidered banding. You can purchase these strips by the yard in most department stores.

Exquisitely Harmonious Are New Compose Effects

One would think that the possibilities of achieving new effects in frocks of the two-piece type had been exhausted. There have been so many variations of this popular style within the past year that it seemed impossible for its vogue to continue through another season.

The introduction of the compose theme into fashions has saved the situation so far as two-piece frocks are concerned. It has given designers a chance for any number of charming and new effects, and given the wearers of these frocks a chance for still further emphasizing their personalities through the medium of color.

In carrying out the compose effect it is not merely that different shades of a color are put together, but that the tones are so graded that the result is exquisitely harmonious. One finds this tendency even in clothes of the most informal character. The de-grade bathing suit of jersey, among the newest models, features a clever combination of three tones of blue, rose, green or beige, according to individual preference.

Concealed Fullness

The prediction of several seasons ago that wider skirts would bring a return to fatter figures has been disproved. Most of the French couturieres, while favoring fullness, so contrive the lines of their frocks that the bodices and hips fit closely, and the plaits or gathers appear suddenly, well below the hipline.

FLEISCHMAN'S COMPANY GAVE PICTURE SHOW

Health Giving Properties of Yeast Shown on Screen to Chamber of Commerce.

The members of the chamber of commerce were treated Tuesday evening to a novel entertainment, a series of moving pictures thrown on a screen by the Fleischman's Yeast company, of Cincinnati.

It was an excellent advertising stunt, showing the health giving properties of this wonderful stimulant to the digestive organs. All your digestive machinery in its workings was shown on the screen and if you had any doubts of the yeast being effective, these were removed by the illustrations given.

Secretary Harry G. Stevenson reported that his committee had erected twelve direction signs on the Jackson pike and before they had finished putting them up, tourists and farmers thanked the committee for their far-sightedness in placing the signs, as they are of great help to the traveling public.

Next Tuesday evening the members are invited to visit Marion Brothers vegetable growing plant. Emerson Martin will be the fellow to handle the pasteboards and his phone number is 150. Be sure and make reservations in time.

Karl Herrman asked members to avail themselves of the chance of giving a boy or girl, inmates of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Orphans' home at Xenia, an outing for the summer, by inviting them as guests in their homes for six weeks. The little folks would enjoy being out in the open for that length of time and you would enjoy having them with you.

R. L. Brehmer spoke on the fact of hard maple shade trees being affected by a parasite and lice. These can be gotten rid of by using Black Flag 40, a poison you can purchase in any drug store. It should be sprayed on the trees.

L. T. Shaner, a member, was reported laid up at home. He met with an accident last week and sustained several fractured ribs.

The Means at Hand

IN A far-off province of India where men have time and are trained to think of possible villainy, Frank Lamson gave himself to evil thoughts. In this little hut on the frontier he was removed from the things he loved, from the men and women he called his kind, and from all example for good.

Here he was on the borderland, face to face with the shadows and mysteries. He could not trust his own servant and he knew the very air to be filled with danger. So he played with his paper weight, turning it over and over, and made plans for revenging himself upon a woman.

He had loved her once and always would. Now that he was gone it was easy to make himself believe that had he stayed in England she would have learned to care for him. There came the chance for a career, the opportunity for fame and the return in splendor. With her refusal in his ears and desperation in his heart, he had set out, not knowing or caring for the future. Now he had time to think, time to regret his haste, and time to plan to get even.

Ellen had married. He had seen that in the papers some one had sent carefully marked test the item escape his eye. And she had married Tom Wilkerson! Lamson remembered easily going Wilkerson and hated him. He wrote to friends for more details, had all the papers sent to him, and waited his chance.

One day he thought he saw the opportunity. A friend, the only one who would have written so, advised the soldier that Wilkerson was in hard straits financially. "He has the reputation of being big hearted, as you may remember," the letter went on. "Some shrewd men who know that kindness may be next to carelessness have him in a hole. Wilkerson woke up just in time, climbed half way out, but there he is sticking. If I had, say, two thousand pounds, I could break the man. You know I'm in a competing line and that I know what I am talking about. But I can't spare the change and, besides, he's your enemy, not mine. Just thought I would let you know that I'll do the work if you'll furnish the money."

Lamson with his arms sprawled on the wooden table in his hut played with the paper weight and tried to summon from his slender resources of money or friends the possibility of acquiring two thousand pounds. He would have to mortgage his future, sell his few possessions, and borrow to raise this sum. No time could be lost. Wilkerson was climbing out of the hole. Before long it would be too late to shove him back.

The man made a list of everything he owned and added the names of the friends who might be induced to lend him money. Then he wrote them all diplomatic letters each suited to the recipient, letters asking money. Impatiently he awaited the replies and as he waited he toyed with the paper weight on his table.

One after one the answers came and each he threw into the basket with disgust. They were all sorry, but you know, one's money does not go far in this country and . . . it was the same.

"They won't lend it to me, that's what they mean. They'd lend it to Winslow, or Thorndyke . . ." He sat up late in the night, calling aloud for an inspiration that would lead him to money, money with which to ruin Ellen's husband. It was then that the fever rode into the window and touched him on the brow. The hut held a sick man, and delirium, and the news went the route of the runners. It was Thorndyke who came to help.

When Thorndyke approached the hut he was met by a frightened native, who gave him to know that Lamson had driven the servants from the hut and had been raving and shouting inside. The delirium which was an evil spirit had been more effective than the threats. The sick man was alone in his need.

Thorndyke broke in the door and there was Lamson at his table, the paper weight in his hand. But Lamson was dead. The fever had halted his plans for revenge.

"Poor fellow," said Thorndyke. "And it was just two months ago he asked me for a loan. Maybe, had I given it to him, he would have asked for leave and gone away where the fever would not have got him."

Then Thorndyke's eye fell on the dull colored paper weight. He held it to the light, then secreted it carefully in his pocket.

"A sapphire!" he said, and he remembered the story of the lost one of Malik Kaffur. "It must be worth easily three thousand pounds! And old Lamson never knew."

Veterinarians in Demand

Young men seeking professions are turning less and less to the veterinarian's calling, and Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the federal bureau of animal husbandry, which protects the nation's meat supply, among other things, is deploring the fact. The thirteen accredited veterinary colleges of the country are turning out scarcely enough graduates to supply the federal service, not to mention the needs of state and municipal services and the large field of private practice, he says.

AMUSEMENTS

"The Red Mill" Marion Davies' much heralded new starring vehicle" and the film version of the famous stage hit by Victor Herbert and Henry Blosser, lived up to all its promises when it opened last night at the Met theater. The new Cosmopolitan vehicle proves that comic opera, lately abandoned on the stage in favor of jazz, still has its charm—and that the drama of the lightsome plays of yore is just as gripping as the drama of any other story.

Incidentally it shows Marion Davies in a new role—a role different from any she ever attempted; more alluring, more charming, and, what is of more importance to audiences, probably the most entertaining in her history. Any talk of new faces on the screen doesn't apply to Marion Davies—every role she gives the screen is a new face so far as she is concerned.

Love Scenes Appealing.

Miss Davies' whimsical comedy talents find a ready opportunity in the new romance of the Land of Dykes; she romps thru a charming role in pigtailed and wooden shoes, dainty as a painted figure on a bit of Holland china; she does some acting that reaches the heights of genius in the dramatic moments which George Siegman, the villain of the new play her love scenes with Owen Moore are romantically delicate.

A notable cast supports Miss Davies in the new picture; a story of love and adventure, laid in Holland; a spectacular winter festival, a great church scene, a stirring adventure in boats on a canal in the huge Dutch village erected at the Metro-Goldwyn Mayer studios for the new picture; these are all interesting high lights in the production.

CONSTRUCTION COSTS DECLINED DURING MAY 1927

Washington, June 21.—Construction costs declined during May to a level slightly above the highest mark registered last year, according to statistics compiled by the Associated General Contractors of America.

During the past thirty months, the range of fluctuation has been comparatively narrow.

The decline last month is reported to have been the result of a drop in the average of prices of basic construction materials. The average of wages paid in the principal construction centers of the country showed no change from the position held in April. May was the fourth successive month in which the wage average has remained unchanged.

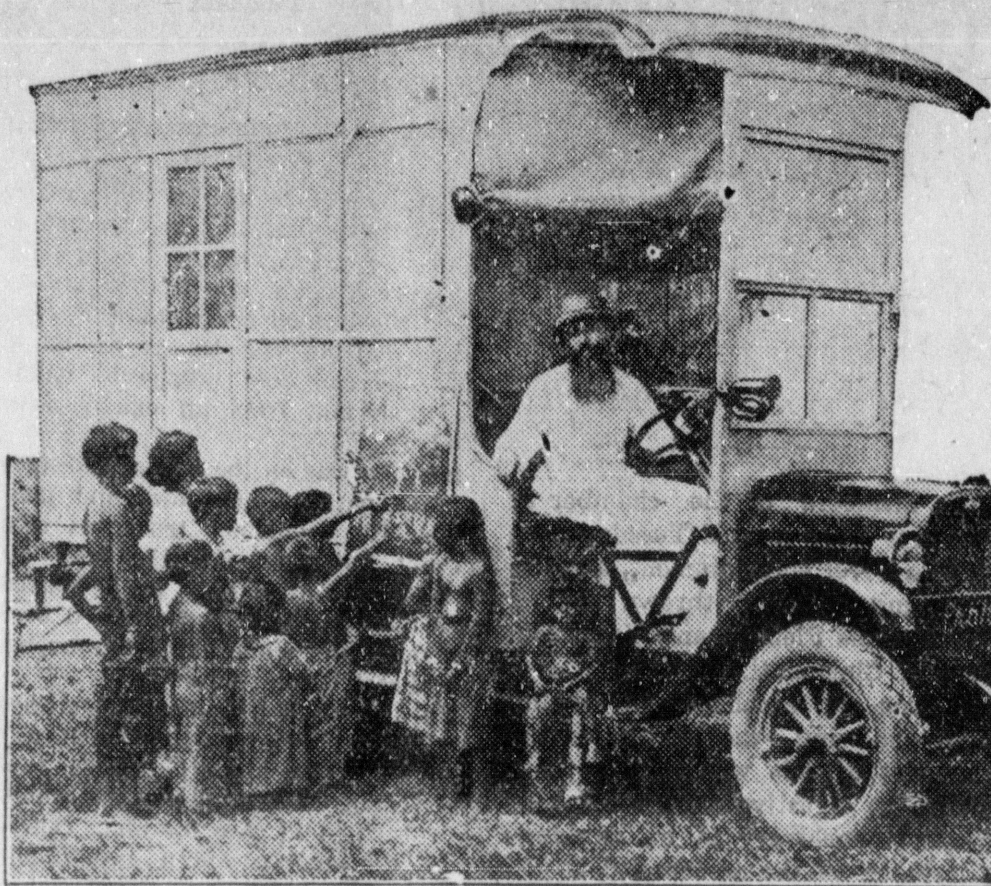

The average of total construction costs last month was exactly double the average recorded in 1913. While this position was reached at no time during 1926, more than half the months of 1925 saw costs holding a level as high or higher than the one recorded for May of this year.

The decrease in the average of prices paid for construction materials was caused by last month's lower prices for sand, gravel, stone and common brick in many localities. A scale which places the 1913 average of material prices to have held the 182 level, one point below the mark registered for April. At no time during 1926 was this level reached.

The index number for average wages paid in May was 227, a mark exceeded in only one month in 1926. It is interesting to note that changes in the average of wages have taken place only twice during the last twelve months. A slight decline last October was off-set by a small rise in February of this year.

Deep Sea Facts

In the depth of the seas there is eternal winter, with a temperature at about the freezing point of fresh water. Eternal night exists, relieved only by the fitful gleams of phosphorescent light. There is absolute calm and silence and no scenery, but a succession of undulations resembling sand dunes.

MISSIONARY TRAVELS IN AUTO-CHURCH

Father Riboud, a French Catholic missionary, believes in bringing the Gospel of God right to the door of the unbeliever instead of waiting for him to come and seek it. So he secured an automobile and equipped it with everything a chapel needs. Now he can minister to the soul-needs of the natives of the Dark continent. The photograph shows the exterior of the auto-church, with Father Riboud holding an illustrated Bible lesson to the semi-naked Malaisian children at Bukit Martajam, province of Wellesley via Penang (Malaysia).

NEW SPARK PLUG IS MONEY SAVER

Small Investment at Proper Time Helps Make Larger Outlay Unnecessary.

Exhaustive tests by automotive engineers prove that motor car owners many times are compelled to spend considerable money to have their engines overhauled, and new parts put in, to overcome operating difficulties that could have been obviated had a new set of spark plugs been installed at the proper time.

More than 2,000 tests reveal that a complete new set of spark plugs at the end of each 10,000 miles of driving, or at least once a year, is actual dollars and cents economy. These tests have definitely shown that the saving in oil and gasoline alone, with new spark plugs, more than pays their cost within a few months, in addition to insuring greater general operating efficiency.

Change Plugs Regularly.

Motor car manufacturers, a few years ago, boasted of the long life of spark plugs. Today they are recommending in their instruction books that owners change their plugs regularly, even though spark plugs have been vastly improved in recent years.

It was formerly believed that a spark plug was giving efficient service so long as it continued to fire regularly. The engineering tests supplied overwhelming evidence that this was incorrect. The greater stress on spark plugs, caused by a combination of poorer gasoline and higher compression engines, saps their efficiency rapidly.

To secure full power from gasoline it is vital that the gas mixture in the cylinders be burned with tremendous rapidity. New spark plugs provide a sufficiently hot spark to accomplish this, despite the poorer quality of present-day fuels.

Causes Leakage.

Under this tremendous stress the electrodes become pitted. Carbon is burned on to the insulator and the shell. This causes a leakage of part of the current supplied from the battery, reducing the spark's intensity. Full power is not extracted from the gas mixture. Much good gasoline is wasted by passing out the exhaust. The longer the old spark plugs are permitted to remain in the cylinders the more vicious becomes the circle of poorer combustion, crankcase dilution and pitting of pistons and cylinder walls.

That is why manufacturers recommend that car owners install new spark plugs at regular intervals. To do so restores power and speed. In less than a year's average running there is a distinct loss which impairs engine performance. Then the owner may be faced with a bill for considerable repair work which could probably have been obviated had he renewed his spark plugs at the proper time.

Proper Steering Often Eliminates Bad Skids

Just why it is that so many motorists think of their brakes alone in connection with skidding remains a problem. Experienced drivers have said time and time again that they can take a car with bad brakes and prevent it from skidding through sheer good steering. But the average driver still clings to the idea that the skid is all a matter of traction and braking. When the streets are slippery and in dangerous condition, careful consideration always should be given to steering, with avoidance of quick movements in steering as the outstanding point. Make changes in the car's direction as carefully as you would apply the brakes, and if the car starts to skid, always steer in the direction of the skid, meanwhile releasing the brakes.

"Put on Your Chains," Is Advice to Autoists

Once you have bought chains for your car, use them. That is the advice of Charles E. Hill, vice president of the National Safety council. Too many motorists fail to do so, either because they are too lazy to put them on or because the process seems too difficult, according to Mr. Hill.

Chains are so simple to adjust, however, that they can be put on by children in very quick time. Some girl members of the headquarters staff of the safety institution recently demonstrated how comparatively simple it is to drape the chains over the tire, so that the hooks just about touch the ground at the rear; shove the car forward until the connecting hooks are about a foot above the road, connect first the inside and then the outer hook as tightly as possible by hand, and when the automobile starts rolling the chains loosen up a bit, which allows them to creep on the tire.

Auto Racers Refuse to Race With French Woman

Giving up a promising career as an opera singer, Mlle. Mozette, petite French automobile driver, now finds that men drivers refuse to race against her. Efforts are being made to match her against Jean La Costa, world's champion racing driver, of Los Angeles. Photograph shows Mlle. Mozette in her racing car.

Must Prove Innocence

The French automobilist in an accident is assumed to be guilty unless he can prove his innocence. The court of cessation, in a test case, laid down the principle that will guide automobile jurisprudence. Heretofore the theory that the person damaged by an automobile accident must prove the driver of the car to be at fault, has prevailed in many courts. Sometimes the same court decided differently in different cases.

More auto accidents are caused by defective brains than by defective brakes.

"Wrist pin" or "piston pin"? Which is correct? Both are used a great deal these days. Either is correct, but piston pin seems more accurate.

There are ruts at the bottom of most hills, warns the National Safety council, which advises motorists not to hit these ruts at too high a speed else they may lose control of the car.

Mental tests for automobile drivers to help decrease the number of accidents, are favored by the committee on the causes of accidents of the National Conference on Streets and Highways.

The sports editor should take over the auto casualties under the head of "The Human Race," for they are running even with births, which average five every minute for the United States.

Giant Magnet Lifts 75 Tons

Work that would require many men is performed quickly and easily with a huge magnet in the Krupp works at Essen, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. It is nearly five feet in diameter and is capable of lifting seventy-five tons.

Must Sign Articles

A law has just come into effect in South Africa making it illegal to publish any report or comment concerning public affairs while a political campaign is going on, without the names of the writers.

French Reign of Terror

The Reign of Terror was the period in France beginning about March 1793, when the revolutionary tribunal was appointed, and ending in July 1794, with the overthrow of Robespierre and his associates. During this time a great number of persons, principally of the aristocracy, were executed.

GROW PLENTY OF TOMATOES

The tomato now enters into more articles of the family diet than any other vegetable, perhaps, except the onion. Even the babies eat tomato juice. No gardner ever had more tomatoes than he knew what to do with because if his garden produced more than he could use there is always a ready market among the neighbors. The bulk of the tomato crop comes from the early plantings. Late planted tomatoes give their big crop in September and October before frosts come and at a time when working in the kitchen in the preparation of catsups, chili sauces, and mixed pickles is less burdensome than in the hot days of August.

It is not too late to sow seed now for the late crop of tomatoes. The seed may be sown in the open and the plants transplanted to their quarters in early July. A constant succession of tomatoes is now easily within the possibilities of the home garden by a selection of varieties and early planting and the result usually is that the tomato crop is flagging in September. The late planted ones will then come in and continue the season until frost nips the vines.

Select early varieties for the late planting as they require a shorter season to come into bearing than the heavier growing later sorts. Tomatoes are not particular as to soil and can be overfertilized so that they run more heavily to foliage than to fruits. They do demand full sun, however, and plenty of moisture.

The best way to grow tomatoes beyond question is trained to stakes for both quality and quantity of fruit. They can be grown in this manner two feet apart, kept trained to a single trunk with only two or three main branches. Late planted tomatoes make rapid growth and the training should be watched and attended to frequently, pinching out unwanted side shoots and forcing the development of the plant into blossoms and fruit.

Sow a packet of tomatoes now for a late crop when the regular season is beginning to deteriorate.

Figures Show Women's Feet Getting Larger

New York.—Women's feet are getting larger. For generations the average size of the foot of the American woman has been 4B. But the average girl has outgrown this standard, say figures published by the Woman's Home Companion, and the average size at present is nearly half an inch longer and a full size wider than that of a brief decade ago. Athletics, dancing and much walking on pavements are advanced as the principal reasons for the increasing size of the feminine foot.

The O. M. C. Bridge Club

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

TED CARSON, sitting at his desk in the city, talked to Howard Fern over his telephone.

"Can you come out and play bridge with us tomorrow? It's our O. M. C. Bridge club and one of the couples can't come. You don't know any of them—but they're perfectly harmless. Yes, bring your tuck—and, say, you don't mind passing as a married man, do you? I'll tell you on the way out. And you can meet your wife at dinner. Madge wasn't sure who she'd get—it has to be some one the crowd don't know."

At about the same time Madge Carson called up Alice Gordon, an old friend who lived in the city. "My dear, I hope you won't think I'm dreadfully rude, but I'm asking you to fill in at bridge tomorrow night. It's our turn to entertain the O. M. C. and Clara and Bill have gone South. You see O. M. C. stands for 'Old married crowd'—though, of course, we aren't exactly old. Well, anyway, we made some fool rules and one of them was that we'd never have anyone belong who wasn't married—and no member is allowed to invite an unmarried stop gap. But really Ted said he'd get some friend of his and I said you could pretend you were married."

So it was arranged, and it was not until Howard Fern came downstairs with Ted for dinner after a hasty change from their business clothes that he knew that the girl whose husband he had been asked to impersonate was Alice Gordon whom he had met five or six times that winter in the city, and in all probability they would meet again occasionally. That was what made the situation a little more embarrassing. But it was agreed that they were to play the role of Mr. and Mrs. Bob Norcott.

After the cards were over the various members took places round the tables drawn together for the supper to follow, and sat while Ted and Madge Carson brought on the refreshments. Some one brought up the subject of proposals and Madge announced that she didn't think that Ted ever did propose to her.

"I certainly did propose," Ted answered. "We were at a Sunday school picnic and I'd been drinking pink lemonade, and we stayed behind the others in the grove—I can remember the mosquitoes. One stung me on the nose when I kissed you."

So that started it. It was moved, seconded and carried that everyone confess how he or she became engaged.

"Don't have the girls in on this," objected Madge. "Because they'd tell different stories and then we'd find out what liars our husbands really are. We'll just listen while you do the romancing. Gerald, it's your turn." So Gerald told briefly of his own proposal, and then came time for Howard.

—Mr. Bob Norcott.
"You'd better let Bob Norcott out of this," suggested Madge, a little nervously, but half a dozen of the men protested. Howard was in for it, and Madge and Alice waited with some concern. Howard showed no signs of disconcertedness.

"Isn't much to tell," he said smiling assuringly to Alice. "The only really remarkable thing about it was that she was willing to have me. You see I'd met her a few times and she—well, you know how a girl can treat a man without being at all rude. Snipity—I call it. I knew I wanted her and I sat up nights trying to think of a way to get acquainted. Then one night we went to fill in at a card party—much like the party tonight—and I knew right then that I'd got to ask her, and though we had both been asked to spend the night I asked our hostess if I could see her home. I thought maybe I'd get my courage up on the way. It was on the train going in to town that it happened. I never had an idea that she'd have me—" Howard looked up and across at Alice with a straight, eager look that made her blush. But somehow she rose to the occasion.

"You're as bad as the rest," she told him. "I was crazy about you from the first. I think it was I who suggested going home together and I'm sure I did the actual proposing."

Madge gasped her amazement, but no one noticed it, and the confessions went on. Then they finished supper and there was the usual leave taking and Howard and Alice were alone with their host and hostess. Howard said he thought really he ought to get back that night—and as he was going perhaps he could take Miss Gordon. So they started and on their way to the station a few minutes walk away they said scarcely a word.

"You are a very good actor," Alice said at last. "I don't see how you carried it off so well."

"I'm not an actor at all," said Howard without smiling. "You know what I meant. It was pretty hard, though, having to sit there and listen to you, knowing all the time that you were laughing at me."

Alice looked away from Howard toward the dark window. "Perhaps I meant what I said, too," she said.

"Then you really could think of me—you would marry me?" asked Howard.

Alice turned and looked at him. "Of course I meant it," she said and then she laughed. "Didn't I say I had to do the proposing—and now I think I really have."

GOOD PROGRAM WAS RENDERED AT INSTITUTE

Derby Union Met With Mrs. Ross Neff on Wednesday Afternoon, June 15.

The annual institute of the Derby W. C. T. U., was held at the beautiful country home of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Neff, June 15, with the following program:

Song—"America"
Prayer Mrs. Hays
Scripture, John 1-4; 7-21
Song—"Carry On"

Reports from different department were given by Mrs. Edwards, Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Christensen, Mrs. Ridgway and Miss Minshall
Mrs. Cora Parks, county director of Bible in Public school" was present and made quite an interesting talk.

Radio messages were received from Mrs. Munns, national treasurer, Mrs. Ella Boole, national president and Mrs. Parks, national corresponding secretary.

Mrs. Stump read a letter from Mrs. Ginder, county director of L. T. L. work, urging the Union to get the schools to cooperate with them and have the children enter the essay contest.

Mrs. Miller, a former pastor's wife, voiced the noontide prayer after which the members and guests were served a bounteous dinner, such as only the Derby Union can serve.

The afternoon session was opened with the song, "America, the Beautiful"; Mrs. Lena Leach, of Columbus a former member and now Franklin county director of Y. P. B. work, gave a splendid talk illustrating the work of the Y. P. B. and showing the W. C. T. U. how they must cooperate with the Y. P. B. and also their responsibility, if the Y. P. B. is to be successful.

This was followed by discussion and question pertaining to the work. The Prohibition tea party was participated in by twenty-three ladies.

The president then introduced a state speaker Mr. Eaky of Columbus whose subject was "America, Keeper of Keys," who gave a splendid, practical, explanation of the prohibition work. He told some of the things the enemies of prohibition are saying, then showed they were untrue. America is the greatest country in the world and our nation is known as the greatest Christian nation in the world.

Rev. Miller, former pasetor, gave short talk, after which the W. C. T. U., benediction was repeated by those present. Fifty-two adults and twenty-two children were present.

Wrote Fables That Live

Aesop was a famous Grecian fabulist, who lived about the middle of the Sixth century B. C. His fables were probably delivered orally and written down later by his admirers. Many have come down to the present time, and are applicable to conditions of modern life.

House Cannot Burn

In Detroit is a house which is said to be 100 per cent fireproof. It has a steel frame and floors of a concrete composition and the plaster is of a very hard character laid on steel lathing. The door and window frames are of metal so that there is nothing about entering into the construction of the house which is inflammable.

Gangs

A Chicago survey has discovered that for every ten boys who adhere to a gang, one girl joins a similar organization of her own. Among adults, if bridge clubs are included, the proportion would just about be reversed
